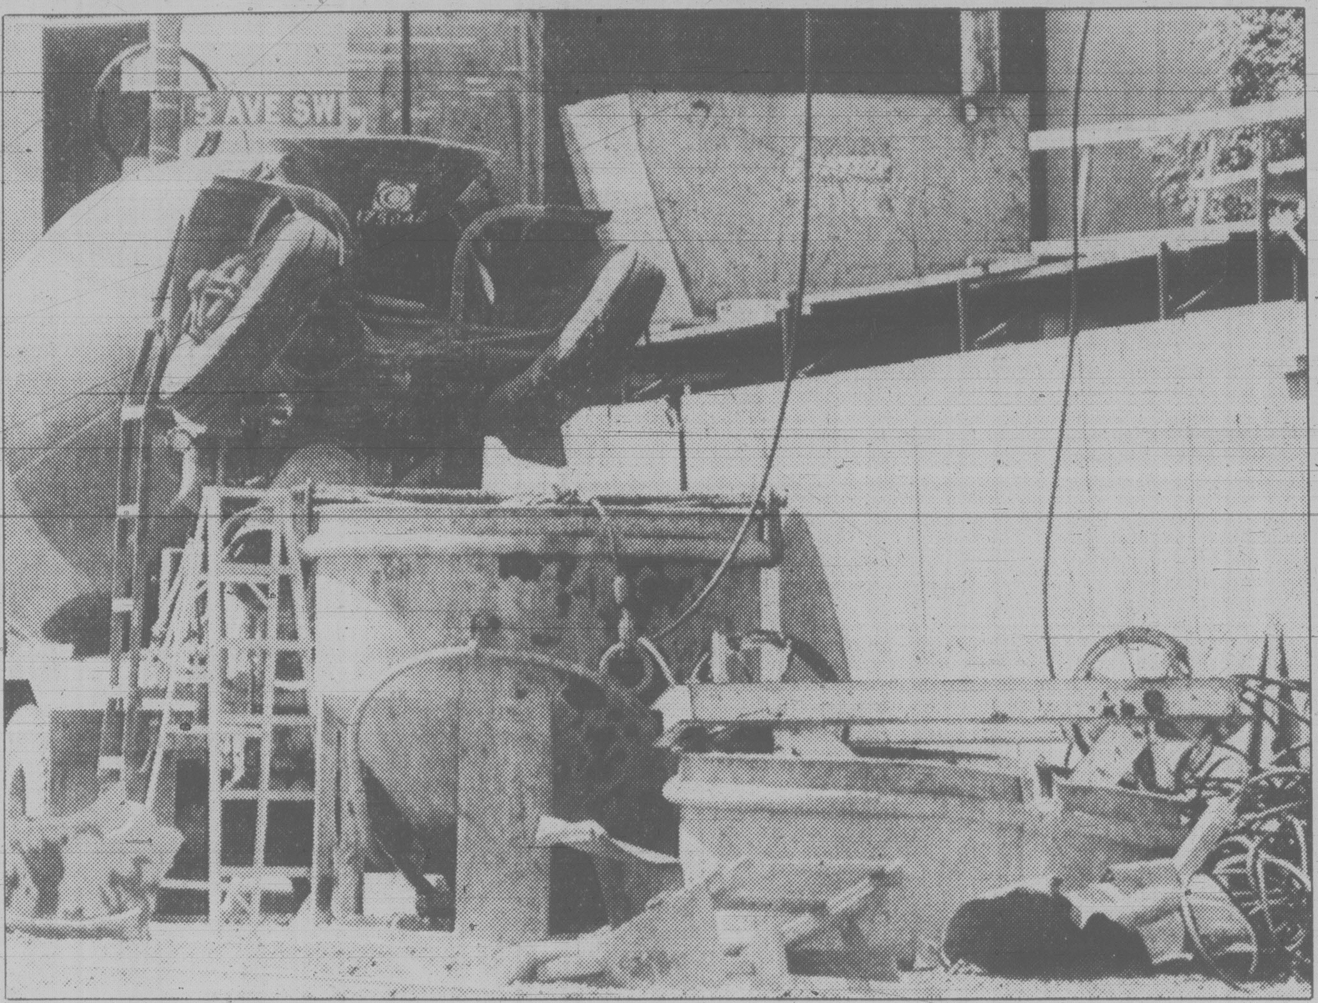
F-18 fighter mired in doubt



BURIED BUCKET: A 3,700-kilogram bucket of concrete (right) lies embedded in sidewalk after plunging 19 floors on a downtown Calgary construction site Thursday. The bucket, buried next to a bucket as it normally looks on the ground, toppled from the top of the Esso Plaza project and barely missed workers, pedestrians and vehicles on the street below.

Firm battles critics

Times News Services

The sleek F-18 fighter that Canada and the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps are buying is getting a bad rap from persistent congressional critics, a veteran test pilot and a senior executive of builder McDonnell Douglas Corp. complained Wednesday.

Joe Waldner, vice-president and general manager for the F-18 program, particularly criticized Representative Bruce Vento (Dem. Minn.) for claiming the F-18 isn't safe for landing on carriers.

"That's absolutely not true," Waldner insisted.

He conceded there have been a series of small problems involving the wing design landing gear and operating range of the F-18. Most have now been corrected, Waldner said.

Amid these and other nagging hints that the fighter planes Canada just bought may be seriously deficient and far more costly than expected, Canada's Defence Minister Gilles Lamontange bravely insisted Thursday that he got a good deal.

"I'm not worried," the minister told FP News Service.

Others certainly are. New Democratic Party defence critic Terry Sargeant told the House of Commons there is "something drastically wrong" with the F-18.

The Winnipeg MP says the plane is so unsafe that President Carter is on the verge of cancelling the U.S. Navy's $30 billion purchase order. He expects a decision from the president next week.

Lamontagne ordered 137 of the planes from Los Angeles-based McDonnell Douglas Corp. last April for an estimated $2.5 billion — the largest, and one of the most controversial, government contracts in Canadian history.

The minister acknowledged that the plane has come under severe criticism in the United States in recent weeks, but dismissed doubts about its safety as "strictly allegations."

He added, however, that he plans to meet U.S. Defence Secretary Harold Brown next week "and I intend to ask him a few questions about it."

In the meantime, the defence department has a team of experts monitoring production of the F-18 and a test pilot posted in the United States to make sure the prototype meets Canada's specifications.

The fighter plane contract — which some say is sure to exceed $4 billion by the time the planes are delivered in 1983 — came after three years of bids, counter-bids and wrangling.

Lamontagne's assurances did little to placate Sargeant, who said outside the Commons that he fears Lamontagne has locked Canada into a multi-billion contract for fighter planes which may never get off the ground.

"I hope I'm wrong," he said, "but it looks to me as if we're going to get stuck with a fighter which will never see active service."

Unsettling reports about the F-18 have been pouring in from the U.S. in recent weeks.

Congressman Vento last month claimed he had unearthed "startling new information which shows that not only is the plane well behind production schedules, it is running $11 billion over budget and is suffering from major technical difficulties."

A report issued in February by the U.S. General Accounting Office shows that:

— The plane, which has been on the drawing board since 1975, does not accelerate as quickly as it should.

— There are problems getting its nosewheel off the ground during take-off.

— It weighs 2,000 pounds more than originally planned.

Liquor on ferry idea attacked

Socred MLA Jack Kempf's suggestion that bar service replace food on B.C. ferries is thoughtless and irresponsible, the B.C. Automobile Association said today.

"At a time when alcohol-related automobile accidents are common, the idea of turning vehicular ferries into floating bars is ridiculous," BCAA spokesman Graham Edis said in a news release.

Edis said the prospect of 100 cars an hour leaving ferries for Vancouver, Victoria and Nanaimo — after their drivers have spent 1½ hours drinking — is frightening.

Kempf said ferry trips are too brief to warrant food service and should be scrapped in favor of revenue-producing bar service.

"If I had my way there would be no food service on the ferry system between the islands," he said.

"Where else in the world do you find an hour and 40-minute trip on a ferry with the provision of food? I think it's ridiculous."

The proposal by Kempf, chairman of the legislature's Crown corporations committee, was also criticized by a spokesman for the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society.

James Drinkwater, a counsellor with the society, said: "It isn't a good idea. The main reason is that B.C. Ferries is ostensibly part of the highways system.

And Transport Minister Alex Fraser recently told a legislature committee is opposed to alcohol sales on ferries.

The government's B.C. Steamship Corp., which operates a service between here and Seattle, but carries no cars, and the Canadian Pacific Railway, which operates a ferry between Vancouver and Nanaimo, have bar service on their vessels.

Gold theft 'imaginative'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A "very imaginative" young business school graduate and Brinks Co. employee disappeared just days before discovery of the loss of about $1.5 million in gold Krugerrands.

It was the largest inside theft in the firm's history.

The district attorney's office said grand theft charges have been filed against Rick Douglas Cunningham, 21, of Brea, Calif., who was last seen June 20 leaving his job as a clerk at Brinks western headquarters in downtown Los Angeles.

Lt. Abel Armas, in charge of the investigation, said Cunningham was a "trusted employee" of the company who stole the gold over a period of 2 ½ months, probably without the help of accomplices.

He said Cunningham received a finance degree from California Polytechnic at Pomona last June and had been a clerk at Brinks for less than a year.

Armas said detectives have determined the method used in getting the coins out of the highly secure vault and Brinks building, but refused to discuss the details.

Liberals hear west's pitch

WINNIPEG (CP) — Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy opened a national Liberal policy convention today warning delegates they must be prepared to accommodate Western Canadians so they are no longer "second class citizens."

Addressing the first national Liberal convention ever held in the West, Axworthy said Western Canadians are "no longer satisfied to feel the traditional role of the hinterland."

Axworthy, the lone Western MP in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet and a potential successor to the retiring Liberal leader, was introduced to the 2,000 delegates as the man who can rebuild the party's fortunes in the West and "breach the western curtain" that had not only divided the nation but the party as well.

Those words of praise were sung by Clyne Harradence, convention co-chairman and an unsuccessful Liberal candidate from the last election in the Saskatchewan riding of Prince Albert.

Only two Liberals were elected in Western Canada Feb. 18 — Axworthy and Bob Bockstael from the Winnipeg riding of St. Boniface.

On the eve of the convention, Liberal cabinet ministers unveiled a $60 million drought program for the parched Prairies and a $300 million package for development of British Columbia coal.

Both programs had been in the works for several weeks but were not announced until Thursday, the day before the cabinet was to meet its Western Canadian supporters.

Senator Alasdair Graham, retiring party president, welcomed delegates to the convention by stressing the need of the party "to rebuild and revitalize the Liberal party especially in Western Canada. That, ladies and gentlemen, is our challenge."

Senator Graham earlier conceded that a prime reason for chosing Winnipeg as the convention site was to increase the party's support in the West.

To try and give the convention more of a Western flavor, resolutions from the four western provinces are to take up the first half of the four hours devoted today to policy debates.

NDP raps site choice for meet

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Thursday Premier Bill Bennett is setting a dangerous political precedent by holding a joint B.C.—Alberta cabinet meeting at Government House, residence of Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving.

"He's throwing a political aura over Government House, which should be above and separate from politics," Barrett said.

Bennett, asked earlier why he chose Government House for the meeting, said he was doing so because the building belongs to the people and has the right amount of space and atmosphere.

The premier would not agree that the vice-regal residence is an inappropriate place to hold a political meeting, noting that Alberta's Government House is often used as a conference centre.

But Barrett said he had checked and found Alberta's lieutenant-governor has not lived in the building since 1938 and since the mid-1960s it has been used as a conference centre.

"Using B.C.'s Government House is entirely different," said Barrett. "If the lieutenant-governor was not living there then he could compare it to Alberta. But by leaving a half truth said, the premier is misleading us again."

Bell Irving said the province paid for the residence and is entitled to use it.

Meanwhile Bennett has refused comment on widespread conjecture that a joint B.C.-Alberta cabinet meeting in Victoria next Friday is designed as a show of strength on the issue of provincial control of resource revenues.

"I don't want to comment on speculation," he said.

It is generally accepted that energy pricing will be high on the agenda. Bennett and Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta are adamantly opposed to a federal proposal to tax natural gas exports.

In recent days, Lougheed has declined to rule out speculation that he is considering a sovereignty association referendum for his province.

Goolagong wins title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia defeated Chris Evert Lloyd of the United States 6-1; 7-6 today to win the Wimbledon women's singles tennis title, her first since 1971.

Earlier John McEnroe defeated Jimmy Connors, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to gain the men's final against Bjorn Borg. (See earlier story page 22)

What is it? Nobody seems to care

MASSET (CP) — Paul Bower has a torpedo-shaped device on the deck of his deep-sea fishing boat, the Kolberg, tied up at the dock in this Queen Charlotte Islands' town.

The contraption looks out of place because it doesn't belong there and Bower is wondering why he got involved with the thing in the first place.

By his reckoning, it cost $7,000 to salvage what appears to be a Soviet-built sonar device. It also took four days and considerable ingenuity, sweat and cursing to float it off the beach and hoist it on deck.

So far the best offer he's had is $700 from the Canadian Forces, enough to tempt Bower to dump it overboard and forget the whole thing.

It started 10 days ago in the pub at Masset. Bower and Dwight Welwood, mate on the Kolberg, heard about a big black "thing" on the shore of the Charlottes' Graham Island near Tian Head.

Many strange things turn up in the flotsam and jetsam that drifts in from the open Pacific to the desolate outer shores of the Queen Charlottes on B.C.'s northern coast.

There are U.S. Army ammunition boxes from the Vietnam war across the ocean, glass fish-net floats from Japan, dragger nets from the north Pacific and, sighted recently, the sonar device.

"We decided to go after it as soon as we heard about it," said Welwood. "We found the thing with no trouble. It was nine feet long and weighed about 600 pounds. It's painted black with Russian lettering on it. There was a length of tow cable on it so we figured it wasn't any kind of weapon."

They secured it with rope to drift logs and waited for high tide to float it off. They towed it to Kolberg with a Zodiac raft Bower rented for the salvage job.

Back at Masset, Bower called Major Ron Beale at the Canadian Forces station who brought in an ordnance team from the base at Esquimalt.

"They determined that it's some kind of sonar equipment, probably for mapping the ocean floor," said Beale. "Nothing at all to do with weaponry or espionage."

Beale offered them $200 for it. Bower lowered his price to $5,000 from $7,000. The major's final offer was $700. No deal.

"They said they were going to offer it to the Americans and we said 'go ahead,' " Beale said.

Said Welwood: "We didn't hear back from the U.S. consulate in Vancouver.

"But there's still a chance we can sell it to a museum. I've seen a lot less interesting things in the museum at the Smithsonian Institution."

Students hold Iran envoys

Times News Services

Iranian students occupied their country's embassy in Paris today and the foreign ministry in Tehran said an angry crowd attacked the Iranian Consulate in the Soviet city of Baku, near the Iranian border.

The ministry said the students who took over the mission in the French capital were holding Iranian diplomats hostage. It was reported from Paris that the eight students were unarmed but were keeping the ambassador and four or five Iranian employees inside the embassy.

The occupiers, all members of an organization called Iranian Moslem Students in France, said they represent no political party. They said in a statement that they were protesting against "those who declare themselves to be supporters of the Imam Khomeini but who do absolutely nothing for our disinherited and our martyrs."

In Baku, a crowd gathered before the consulate and tried to set the building afire, the ministry statement said. No other details were immediately available.

Baku is the capital of Soviet Azerbaijan, whose people are of the same ethnic group as those in neighboring Iranian Azerbaijan. Dissidents among the Iranian Azerbaijanis have periodically agitated against the Khomeini regime.

Meanwhile, 14 Iranians were executed in southern Iran after being sentenced to death by a special court headed by Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, Radio Tehran announced today.

The broadcast said eight of those executed Thursday night were convicted of trafficking in drugs. It said one of the eight was a Jew who was also charged with running a brothel and two others were also charged with homosexuality.

Five of the other six persons executed were military and police officers of the shah's regime who were convicted of such political crimes as torturing students, suppressing Moslems and suppression of prisoners, Radio Tehran said.

Radio Tehran reported earlier that two men and two women were stoned to death early Thursday in Kerman, another southern town, for sexual crimes. Two were women convicted of prostitution; one man was convicted of homosexuality.

Tacoma sloop has Maui lead

The 47-foot Tacoma yacht Chiron was leading the 2,308-nautical-mile Victoria-Maui yacht race late Thursday following a day of light winds and overcast skies.

The sloop switched places with Wednesday's lead boat, Race Passage out of Bremerton, now in second place.

Brother Goose from Everett is third, moving up from 18th spot Wednesday, and leads in division II.

In fourth spot is the Seattle yacht Wizard trailed by Tomahawk from Balboa, Calif.

Winds were reported from the southwest at 10 to 18 knots. The fleet was on the edge of a high-pressure area and there were fears winds would stay light.

The race is entering its sixth day with most of the boats about 600 miles west of Santa Barbara, Calif. The lead boat now has logged just over 800 nautical miles on the direct race route to Maui with about 1,500 nautical miles remaining.

Panagea, from Anacortes, and Brother Goose had the best runs Thursday, each logging 200 nautical miles. Lucy Alice from Seattle travelled only 120 nautical miles, shortest run of the day.

Sight, hearing and now hair coming back

FALMOUTH, Me. (AP) — The family doctor peered through a magnifying glass and pronounced it true — Edwin Robinson, who regained his sight and hearing a month ago after being struck by lightning, now is sprouting hair on his bald pate.

"This is a first, that's for sure," said Dr. William Taylor. "All on top there's hair coming in. We'll know a little better in 10 days or so, but it looks as though he's going to get his hair back."

Robinson, 62, a former truck driver, gradually went blind and deaf after suffering a head injury in a 1971 traffic accident.

Domestic car sales sag 23% as imports rise

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. sales of domestic cars in June fell 23 per cent below sales in June, 1979, and the final third of the month was the worst in 22 years, automakers reported Thursday.

But imports had their second-best June ever, putting the over-all industry decline at 18 per cent.

Compared with June, 1978, total sales were down 36 per cent and domestic sales were down 43 per cent.

The five U.S. producers delivered 510,921 cars during the month compared with 690,353 in June last year.

Importers sold 189,422 cars against 201,245, giving them 27 per cent of the market, their greatest June share and close to the record 28 per cent recorded in several previous months this year. It was only 1.6 per cent below last June's pace.

American Motors Corp. suffered a May-to-June decline of only three per cent this year.

June sales of all cars ran at an annual rate of 7.7 million compared with 7.3 million in May. The domestic rate improved to 5.5 million from 5.2 million the month before. In January and February, the domestic rate was almost eight million and imports were about three million.

The rate is what a year's sales would be if the month were characteristic of a typical year. Last year, 10.6 million cars were sold, of which 8.3 million were domestic makes.

Ford sales fell 29 per cent to 122,971 in June this year from 180,540 in June last year. General Motors were off 19 per cent to 314,911 from 403,537. Chrysler Corp.'s sales were off 39 per cent. Americn Motors Corp. slid 10 per cent to 11,002 from 12,753. Volkswagen of America's rose 10 per cent to 16,080 from 15,136.

In the late June period, 22,811 cars were sold daily, the worst since 17,777 in the same period in 1958.

In that time, GM sales fell only 12 per cent to 114,510 from 146,363, thanks to dealer contests. Ford was off 34 per cent to 41,479 from 71,188 and Chrysler was off 42 per cent to 16,050 from 31,136. AMC, which only reports monthly sales, was off an estimated 23 per cent to 3,202 from 4,646. Volkswagen was up 34 per cent to 7,250 from 6,093.

Prowler caught

An early morning break-in at an apartment block at 531 Linden provided slim pickings for a would-be thief.

Tenants spotted the prowler at 1:51 a.m. and phoned police.

He had a potted plant and a macrame in his arms.

The 24-year-old suspect spent the remainder of the night in jail and appeared in provincial court today charged with breaking and entering and theft.

Huge turnout for Stampede

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Stampede parade wended its way through city streets today under partly-cloudy skies before an appreciative audience expected to number about 250,000 people.

About 25 marching bands and 32 decorated floats participated in the parade, which took about three hours to pass a given point.

Most downtown Calgary hotels are filled for the 10 days of the Stampede. Some smaller hotels and motels are increasing their rates for the 10 days.

Sam Wong, retired president of the Calgary Hotel Association and manager of the International Hotel, says this is because most of the smaller motels have to increase their security staffs.

Scores hurt in blockade

NEW DELHI (AP) — Club-swinging police charged into a crowd of young protesters blocking roads to the main airport of the northeastern Indian state of Assam today and scores of persons were injured.

The violence came at the start of a three-day blockade of air, train and road transport in Assam by student groups demanding deportation of millions of immigrants from nearby Bangladesh.

Reader's Digest fined $1¾ million

WASHINGTON. (AP) — A U.S. federal judge has fined Reader's Digest $1.75 million for violating an agreement with the government not to use simulated cheques and other seemingly valuable items as promotional devices.

The fine was imposed by District Judge James Latchum in Wilmington, Del. The fine followed Latchum's ruling in November, 1978, that Reader's Digest had violated the terms of a consent agreement it signed with the Federal Trade Commission on Jan. 15, 1972.

That consent order required Reader's Digest to stop engaging in various practices connected with sweepstakes, a promotional device used regularly by the company in its business of selling and distributing magazines, books and other products.

Natural gas vehicles tried

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro will spend $200,000 to convert 50 of its cars and vans to operate on natural gas as well as conventional gasoline.

"If our experience of these 50 proves practical, beneficial and economical, we'll expand it," says Charles Nash, Hydro vice-president.

Public probe of tailings urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Climax Molybdenum Corp.'s proposed disposal of mine tailings directly into B.C. coastal waters at Kitsault must be examined in a thorough, public review, environmental groups said Thursday.

Alice Arm tailings deposit regulations passed in 1979 permit the company to discharge 400,000 parts per million a month of suspended solids into Alice Arm at the head of Observatory Inlet.

The company, which wants to develop a molybdenum mine at Kitsault, intends to dispose of 100 million tons of solid waste tailings during a 26-year period.

Engine woes halt Alaska cruise

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Airlines were called in Thursday after engine trouble forced a Vancouver-bound Alaska cruise ship carrying 716 passengers to make an unscheduled stop at this north coast community.

The Cunard Princess, operated by Cunard Lines, was returning from Alaska and had been scheduled to arrive in Vancouver Thursday morning but the engine problem arose Wednesday.

Boy charged in woman's death

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) - An 11-year-old boy has been charged with criminal negligence in the death of a 20-year-old woman.

The woman, Pamela Lynn Loveng died Monday when the vehicle in which she was riding was struck by a pickup truck.

The boy also has been charged with possession of stolen property and theft over $200.

Plane crash victim identified

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — RCMP have identified a pilot killed Tuesday night when a light float plane crashed on takeoff from a northern B.C. lake as Patrick LaBerge, 43, of Granisle. Two passengers, David LaBerge, 16, the pilot's son, and Clayton Towell, 17, were not injured.

RCMP strikebreaking: union

BURNABY (CP) — A union on strike at a Burnaby truck plant has accused the RCMP of strikebreaking.

Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, representing workers on strike at Canadian Kenworth, says RCMP members escorted trucks driven by strikebreakers from the plant and onto the highway, although at least two of the trucks lacked necessary permits, road tests and proper lights.

Lifer found hanging in cell

MISSION (CP) — A 49-year-old man serving life for murder was found hanging in his cell Monday at the medium-security federal prison here, prison officials said. Dennis Squire Hailes was found hanging from the door of his cell, He was convicted in 1976 of the murder of Deane Jones and the attempted murder of Harvey Hogarth, both beer parlor waiters at a hotel in Burnaby.

Sportscaster cleared of assault

VANCOUVER (CP) — CKNW radio sports director Al Davidson was granted an absolute discharge after appearing on a charge of common assault in provincial court Thursday. Davidson had been charged after a scuffle in a Pacific National Exhibition parking lot last March. A lot attendant said he had been punched in the nose after ordering a car towed.

Que. denies shipping jobless to B.C.

PENTICTON (CP) — Guy Lapointe, Quebec assistant labor minister, Thursday denied rumors that the Quebec government has a program to transport unemployed youths to British Columbia.

A federal labor ministry official said there have been rumors in the Okanagan Valley that the Quebec government has been giving its young unemployed and welfare recipients transportation money to B.C. so they can work in the orchards.

The rumors surfaced again following a disturbance last week at a camp occupied by French-Canadian fruit-pickers. Reports said the camp was raided by men carrying clubs and chains.

However, Lapointe said in a telephone interview from Quebec City that there is no aid to Quebec youths wishing to work in B.C.

"We do have an exchange program with the labor ministry in B.C. involving about 20 to 25 young people," he said. "But they are all in the Victoria area and not in Penticton."

He said French-Canadian pickers at Osoyoos, an orchard community south of Penticton and the scene of last week's disturbance, likely are being sponsored by a federal labor department program.

Federal officials in Penticton said that statement is ludicrous.

One official, who did not want to be identified, said Ottawa has exchange programs, but for university students, not farm workers.

The official said there have been indications that Quebec is paying transportation costs for youths going to the Okanagan orchards.

"We have nothing to substantiate it, but over the past few years young people from Quebec have come into our office and intimated that the provincial government of Quebec was paying them to come to B.C."

Police chief pleads guilty

NELSON (CP) — Suspended city police chief George Barr cut short a preliminary hearing Thursday when he pleaded guilty in provincial court to seven criminal charges.

Barr pleaded guilty to making false statements to get loans and credit extensions totalling $150,000 from seven Kootenay-area banks and credit unions.

The plea came on the first day of a preliminary hearing slated to run until July 11.

When Barr is sentenced Aug. 13, he could receive prison terms of 10 years on each count. Under the Criminal Code the court also could grant Barr an absolute discharge, meaning Barr would not have a criminal record and could resume his duties as Nelson police chief.

Barr faced three charges at each of eight Kootenay financial institutions. They included fraud, obtaining credit by fraud and making a false statement in writing regarding ability to repay for the purpose of obtaining a loan or extension of credit.

Barr was suspended from the Nelson police force last Dec. 8 with a month's pay after serving as chief since February, 1976. He remains as suspended chief until he is sentenced and the police board rules on his status.

'Buffalo' Bill hunt begins

FORT St. JOHN (CP) — The B.C. government will appeal a June court decision favoring "Buffalo" Bill Ross as soon as he can be found to be served the official notice of appeal, fish and wildlife officials said Thursday.

Ross was acquitted of illegal possession of wildlife — a charge laid after he killed a buffalo earlier this year. Ross claimed ownership of the animal and hunting rights, but the government also claimed ownership.

Body shop bills top ICBC rates

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Body shops in the central Interior are charging higher amounts not covered by the Insurance Corp. of B.C., a spokesman for the shops said Thursday.

Pat Franklyn, chairman of the Northern Interior Body Repair Association, said rates differ because of differences in rents, shop operations, wages and equipment used. In addition, a unified rate could indicate price fixing, contrary to the federal Combines Act.

Similar additional charges were levied in Campbell River earlier this year, he said.

Shops are willing to negotiate the additional amounts with ICBC, but Franklyn said the government motor vehicle insurance plan will not have anything to do with negotiations.

Jack Skaling, ICBC's material quality control manager, said ICBC's basic rate is $25.60 an hour. An extra $3.20 an hour is paid for repairs other than replacing parts and an additional $7.20 an hour is paid for painting.

Skaling said painting costs had been reviewed in the February-March period and possible price increases had been projected.

Franklyn said his shop charges $31.40 an hour for basic work with an additional $7.92 an hour for painting and $3.52 an hour for body work or welding.

He said Prince George has three union shops but most body shops pay more than union scale of $12.25 an hour and the base rate here averages $13 an hour.

Engineering eyed at SFU

BURNABY (CP) — Simon Fraser University plans to add an engineering school at a cost of about $5 million a year.

A proposal calling for a four-year undergraduate program including civil, electrical and mechanical engineering courses has been turned over to an advisory planning committee of university, government and industry officials.

The University of B.C. currently operates the only engineering faculty in the province.

After recommendations from the advisory planning committee are made, the proposal will be presented again to the senate before going to the Universities Council of B.C. — which funds B.C.'s public universities — for final approval.

CN files bridge crash suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railways has filed a damage action in connection with a collision late last year in which a Japanese freighter knocked the CNR rail bridge across Second Narrows out of commission.

The writ filed in B.C. Supreme Court cites the ship's pilot, Merrill Tingley Jones; Pacific Pilotage Authority and B.C. Coast Pilots Ltd. and claims unspecified damages.

CNR says extent of loss from the 4½-month closure of the span is not fully known but will be supplied during the trial.

CNR claims the Pacific Pilotage Authority and the B.C. Coast Pilots were negligent in failing to supply to the MV Japan Erica a properly qualified, experienced and competent pilot; failing to instruct Jones on the effect of the "double blip phenomenon" that appears at the high-tension pylons to the east of the Second Narrows; and in failing to instruct Jones on the effect of the prevailing tides in Second Narrows.

The collision occurred Oct. 12 when the deepsea freighter was outward bound in heavy fog. CNR claims Jones was negligent in authorizing the ship's departure from Port Moody in those conditions; failing to halt movement of the vessel when he knew continued movement was hazardous; failing to use or properly use the radar equipment on board; failing to properly navigate the vessel and failing to halt its movement when he should have known that a collision was imminent.

Claims by the CNR and other parties hurt by the closure total $28.4 million. The Japanese hope to keep liability below $1.4 million.

Other claimants have yet to assess their full losses.

A trial date has not been set.

Man guilty of reduced count in wife's murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who broke down in the witness stand and asked the jury to hang him for the murder of his wife was found guilty in B.C. Supreme Court on Thursday of a reduced count of second-degree murder.

Pasquale Redavid, 48, had been charged with first-degree murder after 40-year-old Vincenza Redavid was shot outside her Vancouver home last Nov. 20. Medical evidence said she had been shot six times.

The conviction carries a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment. The jury recommended Redavid serve at least 15 years before being eligible for parole.

On Monday, Redavid appealed to the jury: "Hang me, hang me, I'm tired; I shot my wife; I don't want to say any more. She's six feet under; I want 12."

The man then lapsed into uncontrollable sobbing and Chief Justice Allan McEachern adjourned the court.

During the trial, court was told Redavid walked into the Richmond RCMP detachment south of Vancouver half an hour after the slaying and asked to be arrested.

Two of Redavid's children testified their parents had had a stormy marriage and said their father had beaten their mother.

Redavid testified in Italian through an interpreter during the trial and frequently punctuated his side of the story with tears and sobs — occasionally shouting or whispering his answers or standing and flailing his arms.

At times when his family was testifying against him he covered his ears with his hands.

McEachern asked the all-male jury to make allowances for the emotionally upset accused.

Redavid will be sentenced July 8.

Ho hum

It's an old political custom: If you're doing something positive, tell the people you're going to do it. Then tell them you're doing it and, when it's all over, tell them that you have indeed done it.

The federal Liberals are expert at the tactic. Thus no British Columbian will be wildly excited by Senator Bud Olson's great "new" announcement of federal help in the northeast coal development, an "offer B.C. can't refuse."

The proposal is virtually identical to the rough agreement worked out by Ottawa and B.C. a couple of weeks ago after this province turned down a federal offer of a $70 million loan to help build the Anzac spur line to the coal fields.

Ottawa then announced a basic plan that would see the B.C. government build the spur line and the infrastructure needed north and east of Prince George. The federal government would do the necessary work south and west of that city. Costs would be about the same to Ottawa and B.C., about $300 million to $400 million each.

Work to be done south and west of Prince George falls basically into two categories: upgrading of the rail line from Prince George to Prince Rupert, and the construction of a coal port as part of the over-all port development taking place at Prince Rupert.

Olson's announcement Thursday consisted of exactly that. The federal government, he said proudly, will:

— Build a coal port at Prince Rupert for $39 million.

— Contribute half the cost ($4 million) of an access road to the port.

— Ensure the Crown-owned Canadian National Railway will spend $72 million on a cost recoverable basis on the upgrading of its Prince George-Prince Rupert main line.

— Ensure that CN provides the necessary coal trains, valued at $90 million.

— Ensure that CN also provides about $50 million in improved plant capacity.

The grand total is about $255 million, a little less than the original estimates of federal participation.

In the end, Ottawa probably will provide its full share of $300 to $400 million. The extra will come in the form of miscellaneous programs, such as manpower training, and special programs for Indians living along the route.

That sum may not, however, end up as 50 per cent of the total costs of the project. The chances are that massive overruns will occur on the B.C.-built Anzac spur. Already it's been predicted that tunnelling costs alone may add $90 million or $100 million to previous cost estimates for the spur.

Despite its flowery language, Ottawa is not promising more than it did a month ago. As B.C. Industry Minister Don Phillips said, "Ho, hum."

Positively positive

Be positive. That's motto of B.C.'s Social Credit government. To be negative is to side with the Opposition.

Some might think it impossible to be positive about the negative. But there are negative things to be positive about, if one isn't postively negative.

For instance, the B.C. Steamship corporation is going through a negative period ferrying tourists from Seattle to Victoria. Charter flights were booked to accommodate travellers who were scheduled for a non-existent ferry run. A costly slip.

A Seattle radio station has been bad-mouthing the Steamship Corporation because this year it repeated an error that was made last year. For two years running the radio station helped sell ferry tickets only to find that the particular sailing was overbooked. Irate tourists took their frustration out on the radio station personnel. Poor public relations.

On top of that, the weather has been lousy, the U.S. economy is slipping into recession and Mount St. Helen's is scaring tourists away from Washington State. The passenger count on the run is down 10,000 over last year when the Princess Marguerite was still operating. Bad for business, and an opening for all the 'Maggie' lovers to say I-told-you-so.

It all adds up to being negative about the ferry operation, unless you think positively and realize that had it been a bumper month for tourist traffic, there might have been even more booking slips.

FRED CLEVERLEY

Dishing up U.S. television

WINNIPEG — Federal Communications Minister Francis Fox has been understandably reluctant to prosecute residents of remote areas for watching illegal American satellite television. There is no alternative entertainment for these people.

But what about urban Canadians, who already have the Canadian networks and federally-licenced cable to bring them American programs as well?

This problem may end up in the federal government's lap as a result of a meeting held at Falcon Lake, 100 miles east of Winnipeg, in the middle of Manitoba's biggest resort district, this past week.

At that meeting, about 60 permanent residents of the resort area listened to a proposal that would give them two clear American satellite signals for an annual cost of about $140 — a figure roughly equivalent to the cost of city cable.

TV receiving dishes on the prairies challenge federal legislation.

Cottages included

However, the simple fact is that to make the proposition viable, a number of summer cottage owners — mostly from Winnipeg — would have to sign up for summer service, at $75 a year. Deposits were collected on the understanding that if the first signal is not available by August, they would be refunded.

If the service gets underway, it will be unique in that the bulk of its customers will be Canadians who already have what the federal government considers adequate television service at their homes. The government will have to decide whether these Canadians — when they happen to be at their summer cottages — qualify as remote residents and the benefits of looking the other way as far as legalities are concerned.

But even if the government decides to prosecute, the case could drag on for years, because, in the field of electronics, the technicians are miles ahead of the bureaucrats and lawmakers.

In Canada, there is nothing illegal about an individual putting up a satellite receiving dish and watching whatever he wants. But if he decides to sell the signal to his neighbor, he cuts across an agreement between the U.S. and Canada that neither will capture, for resale, satellite signals in the manner that cable companies pirate the off-air signals of border stations.

At Falcon Lake, which has a potential of 1,100 cottage owner customers, the signals will not be sold

The Winnipeg company proposing the new service, Western Satellite Television, has begun collecting deposits ($200 from permanent residents, $100 from summer cottagers). If 200 or more sign up, the company says it will put a receiving dish on private land in the park, and will set up a low-powered transmitter capable of broadcasting for a distance of 10 miles.

Initially, the signals will be free to all within receiving distance. Then the company will begin installing decoders on the sets of those who have paid. Once the installation is complete, the company will notify everyone, by running cards over the air, that the signal is about to be scrambled, and those wishing to continue to receive it will have to pay.

There is a fine legal reason for all this. As long as the signals are free, no law is being broken. Once it is scrambled, it is not being sold. Only the decoders are being rented.

As well, the deposit money will be turned over to a group of local residents, who will buy into the $75,000 system as far as the money will go. Again, there is a legal reason. If the government decides to prosecute, it will have to shoot at the customer-owners, and not at the company.

Two signals are being offered because the department of communications says that only two channels are open in the Falcon Lake area. Residents know, however, that they are able to receive only one signal, that of the CBC from its rebroadcasting station in Kenora, Ontario, 33 miles distant. The signal is seldom clear.

Because only two channels are available, the customers will have to choose from the American satellite signals that are available. Where this choice has been offered elsewhere, it has gone to the Atlanta super station, and to Home Box Office, which runs uncut, premium movies.

If there are enough customers, the system can be switched into the UHF band, and up to 26 signals made available.

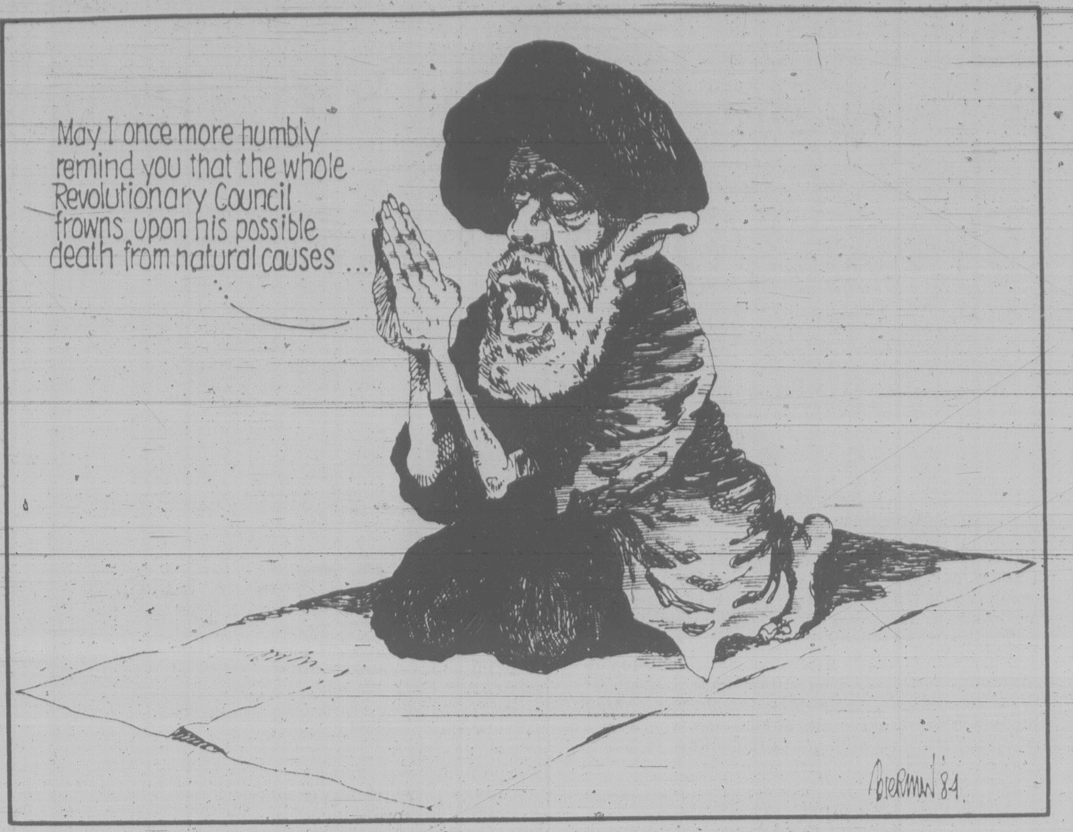
CBC criticized

There seems little doubt that the system will be activated. At the meeting, most of the time was devoted to complaints about CBC programming. One woman, when she had confirmed that the satellite receiver could be installed only if there were 200 or more customers, asked the company whether, should only 150 customers sign up, they could pay extra and still get the signals.

The move will prove to be a big headache for the government. Will Winnipeg viewers, having tasted Atlanta, New York and Home Box Office at their summer cottages, be satisfied with Fargo and Valley City, North Dakota, at home during the winter?

Will the government try to take the cottagers to court?

Stay tuned.



May I once more humbly remind you that the whole Revolutionary Council frowns upon his possible death from natural causes ...

WALTER STEWART

Digging relics of wisdom

OTTAWA — The existence of tunnels beneath Parliament Hill wa first reported by columnist Doug Small last March, but it was only this week that FP News Service learned that there is a creature living in the catacombs beneath the Commons, and that he has been there for half a century.

The discovery came as a result of an archaeological expedition led by experts from the National Museum, with manpower provided by Carleton University journalism students, who have little to do, now that there is an ebb in the polling season.

I went along, not knowing what to expect — certainly not what we found.

20 feet down

The dig began from a point overlooking the Ottawa river, behind the House of Commons. Bulldozers and a backhoe were employed at first, then the students turned to spades and pickaxes as a slanting shaft was opened down about 20 feet, beneath the foundations of the building. The work went without incident for several days until, late in the afternoon of Monday, June 30, David Grub, the supervising archaeologist, came rushing up to where I stood on the hillside, observing those who were actually working.

"You must come at once," he barked, "We have made a startling discovery!"

Not waiting for a reply, he turned on his heel and disappeared down the tunnel. I followed. As the light faded down our slanting path away from the sun, I thought I could hear, above the clunk of pickaxe hitting soil, a dull, droning noise. We went along for perhaps 100 yards, picking our way over rocks and rubble in the semi-darkness, turned a corner and suddenly, there he was.

The students had broken a hole about the size of a dinner-plate in an ancient wall, presumably the wall of one of the original cellars. Through the hole, we could see into a sort of cavern, dimly lit by a single candle on a sconce high on the wall. Beneath this shuffled an old man, with a long, grey beard, rags for clothes and, in his hand, a recent copy of Hansard, the parliamentary record.

The greybeard was shuffling around in a circle, crooning to himself. That was the droning noise I had heard earlier. Now, we could make out the words:

Oh, we got no time for sex or crime,
For drugs or prostitution;
The land is strong, but won't be long —
We've got no constitution.

"Great Scott", I stammered, "Is it Eugene Forsey?"

Grub waved me to silence. The old man went on:

Some malcontent would have us bent
On jobs or on inflation;
But P.E.T. says let it be —
Our watchword's "Patriation."

As the verse ended, the singer paused and muttered, "Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear." Then he continued:

The unemployed are quite annoyed;
The nation's in a dither,
While, debonair, our only care,
Is fetching parchments hither.

Again, the ancient one stopped and grumbled to himself, "An Hon. Member: Oh, oh."

Then he turned, and seemed to be about to leave, when I shouted, "Just a minute!"

He stopped, startled, whirled to confront the sudden appearance of a dirt-stained crew peering at him through the broken wall, and growled, "Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of personal privilege."

We called him over to us, and gradually, we were able to piece together his story. His name was Mose — he would give no other name, but said we could call him, Mose, the King of the Catacombs, if we liked. He was a former member of parliament who had wandered down into the cellars below the Commons some time in 1930, and lost his way in the system of tunnels beneath the hill.

He was somewhat bitter about the fact that no one ever reported his absence.

He had been there ever since, living entirely on scraps that filter down through a hole in the floor of the West Block cafeteria, and spending his days and nights reading Hansard, copies of which are dumped down a chute from the distribution office from time to time. He had formed the habit of speaking in Hansardese, which made him difficult to follow, sometimes. He kept on shouting "Withdraw, withdraw!", and "An Hon. Member: Question, question."

We told Mose that, now he had been found, he was free to rejoin the world, but he declined. He said that, by the general flavor of what he had been reading lately, he thought he was better off where he was.

Buried in peace

He asked if we would kindly close up our tunnel on the way out. I said we would, but asked if I could come to call on him, from time to time, to glean the wisdom of his ponderings, deep beneath the bowels of Parliament Hill.

Mose replied, "Hear, Hear", which I took to mean yes.

We gathered up our tools, placed a rock in the hole that gave access to his hidden lair, and began to wend our way back to the sunlight, and the world. As we went, we could hear that old Mose had begun to croon again:

Oh, hearts may ache, the land may break,
As to the ground we're wrestled,
But we won't rest 'till in its nest,
The BNA lies nestled.

Federal robbery

Export taxes are highly discriminatory. They penalize the producing provinces and encourage consumption in the rest of the country. They are wasteful and they are divisive. They are anti-Canadian because they give Western separatists another argument for breaking up the country.

If Ottawa slaps an export tax on natural gas, it would take $2 billion a year from Alberta and more than $300 million annually from B.C. i.e. reduce the income of the B.C. Government by as much as 10 per cent.

It would cut back the funds which we now use to build hospitals, schools and highways in the West. And it would be used to buy high-priced foreign oil instead.

Alberta first ran into a massive oil export tax in 1974. Now that our oil production is on the decline Ottawa is turning to natural gas. It wants to tap our provincial resource revenues because its own spending program is out of control.

What would that accomplish? Alberta's $5 billion Heritage Fund wouldn't last more than a month in the hands of a federal government which spends more than $60 billion a year. British Columbia's $300 million natural gas surplus account wouldn't last three days at Ottawa's current spending rate.

An export tax adds insult to injury. For decades Westerners have paid 20 per cent more than the world price for goods manufactured in Ontario and Quebec. Now they are being asked to sell their raw materials at half price at home and abroad. This is a "resource rip-off" which we Westerners won't tolerate from a federal government which treats us like strangers in our own land.

Taxation without representation is bad enough. Being plundered without any thought of compensation is robbery. It is a crime which five million Canadians won't tolerate for long! — Jack Davis, MLA, North Vancouver-Seymour.

They all came

I am puzzled by the assertion in the June 20 'Town Talk' column that "nine times out of ten" prospective federal cabinet visitors to Victoria have failed to show. Even granting some room for journalistic hyperbole, I think this statement, and the conclusions drawn from it, are wildly inaccurate.

Since the new government assumed office, I have had a modest role to play in co-ordinating ministerial visits to Victoria so that the federal cabinet can develop a better feel for the issues of concern to people in this area.

While I may be leaving a couple out — there have been so many it is hard to keep track — I know we have had visits from Treasury Board President Donald Johnston, (three times), Senate Leader Ray Parrault, (four or five times), and Transport Minister Jean Luc Pepin (twice). In addition, we have hosted Minister of State (Wheat Board) Hazen Argue, Employment and Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy, Justice Minister Jean Chretien, Minister of State (Mines) Judy Erola, Secretary of State Francis Fox, Energy Mines and Resources Minister Marc Lalonde, National Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne, Minister of State (Trade) Ed Lumley, Minister of State (Economic Development) Bud Olson, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouelett, Labor Minister Gerald Regan, Environment Minister John Roberts, and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan. It is true that Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc could not come when originally scheduled — his visit was delayed a week so that he could spend more time in Victoria and meet with local sports fishermen. This meeting took place on June 26.

Apart from the one-week delay in Mr. Leblanc's plans, I am not aware of other cancellations. In fact, given the busy schedules of cabinet ministers, I have been rather surprised there haven't been more changes. The record has been remarkable.

The re-elected Liberal government may be open to criticism on many accounts, but given the record since the election, I don't really think it is fair to suggest that there is a policy of "paying more attention to the West without really going there." In fact, if we're not careful, other parts of the country may start to complain that we are getting more than our share of attention. — Gerry Kristianson, 5055 Catalina Terrace.

Broader view

In the continuing debate over a site for a Victoria convention centre, those who favor building on the waterfront seem to take a very narrow view of the real interests of business. For example, one booster says that in business, location is everything, and therefore we should build on the waterfront to attract conventioneers with the aid of our magnificent view. But not only convetioneers admire sea views. An open waterfront is a magnificent draw to aid all Victoria businesses.

If those in favor of blocking the waterfront would take off their business blinkers, they would get a broader view of their own interests. They would then support a wide open water front for the greater enjoyment and prosperity of all. — F. B. Cahill, 2427 Nottingham Road.

Who needs provincial gov'ts?

By MOIRA FARROW
The Vancouver Sun

If any issue succeeeds in breaking up Canada, it will be natural resources rather than French on cornflakes boxes.

Even elementary children know that the future of this world rests on resources. Today's battle over oil prices is probably tea-party chatter compared to what lies ahead.

Before long, many people in the world will be faced with the decision of whether to buy food or heat. And not all those people will be in Third World countries. The massive migration into B.C.'s Lower Mainland from other provinces today is not just because we have magnificent mountains. It's because we have a mild climate and our heating bills are much lower than those in most other parts of the country.

And so natural resources have become a time-bomb within Confederation. Our oil, gas, trees, and minerals should be our greatest national assets, making us one of the luckiest countries in the world. Instead, they are being used as weapons in a tragic battle for power.

The biggest political mistake ever made in Canada was to give provinces control of their resources. That statement is probably considered heresy — particularly when it comes from a Westerner. But a little bit of heresy is a nice change from the Ottawa-bashing that seems to be the favorite occupation in Western Canada today.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde was almost stoned to death by opposition politicians and media pundits when he recently rejected the idea of "economic sovereignty with political association." He didn't mention Alberta by name but that's the province he obviously had in mind.

Well, he was quite right. The only pity is that he didn't go far enough. Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed is not engaging in economic sovereignty — a more accurate description would be economic piracy.

It says a lot about the state of Canada today that Lalonde took so much abuse for a remark that was actually a defence of Confederation. Lougheed's greedy determination not to sell a drop of oil to his fellow Canadians at other than sky-high prices is far more of a threat to Confederation than the arguments over the French language.

Confederation is defined, according to the Oxford Dictionary, as an alliance. Which must mean that the members of the alliance — the provinces — try to hang together. Exactly the opposite is happening in Canada today.

The provincial premiers pay lip service to Confederation. They consent to being wined and dined at 24 Sussex Drive. But they won't contribute one barrel of oil, one cubic foot of gas, or one lump of coal to the cause of national unity.

Sharing is surely supposed to be part of Confederation. Just as members of any normal, happy family share the food on the dinner table, the rich members of Confederation should be sharing their wealth with the poorer members.

The only way to save this country is to have federal control of natural resources. It won't happen, of course, because Lougheed would lead the drive for Western separatism if Ottawa ever attempted such a constitutional change. But what a pity we can't turn back the clock and give all parts of the country a share and a say in the development of our resources.

The rest of the world, if it ever thinks about Canada at all, must dismiss us as crazy rich kids. Half the people in the world today barely get enough food and shelter to survive. But we, with one of the highest standards of living ever known, spend our time fighting among ourselves.

Listen to The National news on CBC in the evening. It's an almost endless saga of federal-provincial squabbling. The United States worries about the defence of the Western world. The United Kingdom worries about economic survival. Southeast Asia worries about going to bed hungry. And in Canada we devote most of our time and energy to family fights. It's obscene.

The solution has to be a radical one. Let's get rid of the provincial governments. Who needs them? We must be one of the most over-governed countries in the world. One national government with offices in the East and West would be cheaper and a lot more efficient.

There isn't any provincial government in this country from Victoria to Charlottetown that we'd miss — let alone any provincial premier. Regionalism will be the death of Canada. Let's trade it in for a little bit of nationalism. The country we'll save will be our own.

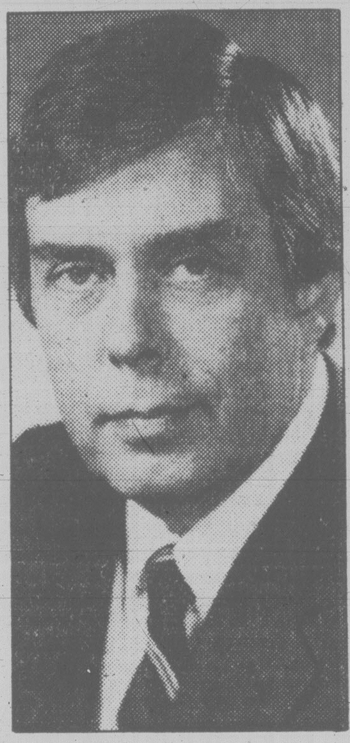
Public must know what government doing

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — "No wonder people watch commercials: they're the last bright flickers of optimism in a gloomy world of dissent." — Jim Fleming, Minister of State for Multiculturalism, Toronto, June 20, 1980.

The press has been taking a bit of a kicking recently from politicians — not that it is necessarily a bad thing.

Three weeks ago, Robert Stanfield delivered the closing address to a by-invitation-only conference on Politics and the Media at Erindale College. The former Conservative leader was, he said, "as mad as hell" about the press. What seemed to make him particularly mad was the complacency of the political journalists at the conference as they talked for two days about their work and their role. They were not nearly as concerned as Mr. Stanfield was about pack journalism, the trivialization of events and issues, and the media's tendency to reinforce, rather than challenge, conventional wisdom. There was a fair element of truth in what Mr. Stanfield, the only politician in history to have been bitten by a football (dropped), had to say.



FLEMING . . . turns on press

Next, enter Jim Fleming, a former journalist himself, whose speech last month to radio and television news directors in Toronto went virtually unnoticed and unreported. Mr. Fleming seemed to be seeking to establish himself as the Cassandra of the cabinet chamber. The government, he cried, is misunderstood — "The equality of opportunity in Canada today far exceeds the egalitarian dreams of Marx and Engels. As a consequence, the federal government has never been less liked, less credible, and less respected."

Special interest groups make social conflict a way of life, according to Mr. Fleming. He ought, however, to distinguish between "vested" interest groups and "public" interest groups which attempt to speak for the broader community. The former — whether they are telephone companies or the auto industry — are mostly powerful, well-financed lobbies. The latter are small, poorly organized and largely unheard — witness the Consumers' Association of Canada, which is being stripped of two-thirds of its federal funding. A government which can put up $200 million in loan guarantees for Chrysler chooses to economize by taking $315,000 away from an organization which thinks the cars Chrysler builds should be safe to drive.

By this roundabout route, we return to the news media which, in the Fleming scheme of things, accentuate the negative and exacerbate the conflict. "The media, especially television, amplifies the sound and fury. It focuses on conflict, presents it in simplified terms. The air is littered with vagrant opinions with no visible means of support . . . Chicken Little becomes the voice of the people."

Nice rhetoric, that, but what's the solution? Mr. Fleming put his finger on part of it when he talked about the government's failure to be open and to explain its decision-making. But a freedom of information bill will be introduced. How much openness will this really produce? "We're making it clear," said Mr. Fleming, "that we expect them (civil servants) to be more open and free with the media but not, of course, about policies and programs still under discussion."

Of course not. When is the government going to get it through its head that, if it wants understanding and support, it is going to have to explain to the public what it is doing and why it is doing it, at the time it is doing it? When it waits until the deed is done, all the public can do is to complain and contest and create more of that conflict the governemt professes to want to reduce.

A visit with the folks

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Periodically I go back to a churchyard cemetery on the side of an Appalachian hill in Northern Virginia to call on family elders. It slows the juices down something marvellous.

They are all situated right behind an imposing brick church with a tall square brick bell tower best described as honest but not flossy. Some of them did construction repair work on that church and some of them, the real old timers, may even have helped build it, but I couldn't swear to that because it's been there a long, long time.

The view at this time of year is so pleasing that it's a pity they can't enjoy it. Wild roses blooming on fieldstone fences, fields white with daisies, that soft languourous air turning the mountains pastel blue out toward the West. The tombstones are not much to look at. Tombstones never are in my book, but they do help in keeping track of the family and, unlike a family, they have the virtue of never chafing at you.

This is not to say they don't talk after a fashion. Every time I pass Uncle Lewis's I can hear it say, "Come around to the barber shop, boy, and I'll cut that hair." Uncle Lewis was a barber. He left up here for awhile and went to the city. Baltimore. But he came back. Almost all of them came back finally, those that left, but most stayed right here all along.

Well, not right here in the churchyard, but out there over the fields, two, three, four miles away. Grandmother was born just over that rolling field out there near the woods the year the Civil War ended, lived most of her life about three miles out the other way there near the mountain, and has been right here near this old shade tree for the past 47 years.

We weren't people who went very far. Uncle Harry, her second child, is right beside her. A carpenter. He lived 87 years in these parts without ever complaining about not seeing Paris. To get Uncle Harry to say anything, you have to ask for directions.

"Which way is the schoolhouse?" I asked, though not aloud of course.

"Up the road that way a right good piece" he replies, still the master of indefinite navigation whom I remember from my boyhood.

It's good to call on Uncle Lewis, grandmother and Uncle Harry like this. It improves your perspective to commune with people who are not alarmed about the condition of NATO. I noticed with complete satisfaction that none of them is disposed to complain about having to choose between Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter. Not a whine out of anybody about the flabbiness of the dollar.

The elders take the long view. Of course you don't want to indulge too extensively in that long a view, but it's useful to absorb it in short doses. It corrects the blood pressure and puts things in a more sensible light.

After a healthy dose of it, you realize that having your shins kicked in the subway is not the gravest insult to dignity ever suffered by common humanity.

Somewhere in the vicinity is my great grandfather, who used to live back there up against the mountain and make guns, but I could never find him. He was born out that way in 1817 — James Monroe was president then — and I'd like to find him to commune a bit with somebody of blood kin who was around when Andrew Jackson was in his heyday.

After Jackson and Abraham Lincoln and the Civil War, he would probably not be very impressed about much that goes on nowadays, and I would like to get a few resonances off his tombstone, a cool frisson of contempt maybe for a great grandchild who had missed all the really perilous times.

Unfortunately, I am never able to find him, but there is Uncle Iryey, grandmother's oldest boy. An unabashed Hoover Republican. "Eat all those stringbeans, boy," I hear as I nod at his tombstone.

And here is a surprise: Uncle Edgar. He has been here for years, but I have never bumped into him before. I don't dare disturb him, for he is an important man, the manager of the baseball team, and his two pitchers, my Uncle Harold and my cousin-in-law Howard, have both been shelled on the mound and Uncle Edgar has to decide whether to ask the shortstop if he knows anything about pitching.

My great grandfather who made guns is again not to be found, but on the way out I passed the tombstone of another great grandfather whose distinction was that he left an estate of $3.87. It is the first time I have passed this way since I learned of this, and I smile his way, but something says, "In the long run, boy, we are all as rich as Rockefeller", and I get into the car and drive out onto the main road, gliding through fields white with daisies, past fences perfumed with roses, and am rather more content with the world.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

Summer was officially only a week old, yet there was a touch of fall in the air. It was provided by a band of tiny birds — shorebirds.

I first spotted them coming in from the sea, over the beach at Witty's Lagoon. They came in low, swooped up to clear some shrubs on the bar, then dropped again to examine the mud flats being exposed by the ebbing tide.

They seemed nervous — reluctant, yet anxious, to land. They made several passes over a particularly inviting mud bank but each time, as they fluttered to land, they broke away again to make another wide sweep of the lagoon.

There were, to me anyway, many just-as-inviting mud banks in the lagoon, but this one had some peculiar attraction for them because no matter how far they ranged they always came back.

They were small, but outside of that there was little to help me identify them. Aside from counting them — there were eleven — and noting their size, I could only guess what they were. And the most likely candidate was Western Sandpiper.

But their identity was less important than the fact that they were there, the first fall migrants of the season — at least the first for me; a band of Dowitchers had been seen at Metchosin Lagoon a couple of days earlier. They get credit for getting this year's fall migration under way around Victoria.

Birdwatchers have a peculiar fascination about fall. They just don't seem to be able to get summer out of the way fast enough. That's why, as soon as the last shorebirds leave on their way north, the birdwatchers begin their watch for the first to start south.

It is seldom a long wait. As a matter of fact, it is not always possible to be sure if you're seeing the end of the north-bound travellers, or the beginning of the south-bound flight. But there is usually a brief period when none of the migrant species of shorebird are seen — usually June — and that's the way most of us divide the seasons. Up to the beginning of June they're spring migrants; by the end of June they're fall migrants.

Thus it was that my little band of sandpipers were autumn migrants — the first of the Western Sandpipers I had seen since late in May. In the intervening weeks they had probably made their way to their nesting grounds in the high arctic where, for some reason, they failed to get a family started. And since the season for raising families in the arctic is so short, most birds, if they don't get an early start, abandon the idea, and the area, and start drifting south again.

Of course there's always the possibility that these early fall migrants never did reach the nesting grounds, that the urge to reach their summer home and raise a family was never too strong and they just sort of drifted along with the season.

Whatever the reason, those sandpipers, for me, are the beginning of the most exciting season for birdwatching. Not only does the fall migration bring back most of the species of spring, but a few new ones as well. It is also the time of greatest challenge. No longer are the birds in their bright spring finery. Dull fall plumages, and duller immature plumages, make the problems of identification often difficult and sometimes impossible.

But identification is only one face of autumn birding — there are also the rarities, the wanderers, birds far from where they should be. Birds like Little Gulls from Asia, Ruffs from Siberia, Cattle Egrets from California, Tropical Kingbirds from Mexico, or Wagtails from Alaska help make fall a season to look forward to.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday, following gains in New York.

The short end of the market was up 20 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues fell one-quarter of a point.

Day-to-day money was available at 12½ per cent. Three-month treasury bills traded at an average of 10.24 per cent, down from 10.38 last week, and six-month bills at 10.40 per cent, up from 10.37 per cent. A special one-year bill traded at 10.44 per cent.

Analysts said feelings that New York dealers have managed to place the majority of new corporate issues which have been overhanging the market coupled with a sucessful 15-year treasury note tender prompted the advance.

Silver

Closing basic price of 1,000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area, according to the Scotiabank, $17.00 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $17.30 asked. Previous day $16.70 and $17.00.

New rules set for advertising

TORONTO (CP) — Advertising created after Aug. 1 must not be demeaning or derogatory to individuals or groups and must not cause deep or widespread offense in the light of generally prevailing standards, the Advertising Standards Council has ruled.

The council, the self-regulatory arm of the Canadian advertising industry, released its latest code of advertising standards Monday.

The council noted that standards of taste are subjective and subject to change and said the code is not intended to impede the sale of products which some people may find offensive, providing the advertisements for such products are not demeaning or widely offensive.

The council said in a brochure containing the code that advertisers, their agencies and the media have agreed that all broadcast commercials directed to children and all televised commercials for feminine sanitary products should be cleared by special committees of the council prior to station acceptance.

Consumers who feel that any advertisement carried by Canadian media violates the standards code are urged to contact the council.

If council staff decide the code has been violated, they will ask the advertiser to amend or withdraw the advertising. If the advertiser does not do this, the media involved will be notified and will not accept the message in its existing form.

Bob Oliver, president of the Canadian Advertising Advisory Board, an association of advertisers, agencies and media associations which funds the council, said additions to the standards code "all cover significant areas of frequent consumer complaint, some of which the council could not deal with under the previous edition of the code."

The code contains 15 clauses, four of which are new, including the clause on taste and opinion.

The other three new clauses state:

— No advertisement shall be presented in a format which conceals its commercial intent, as distinguished from editorial or program content. Advertisements also must not be subliminal — that is, use images or sounds below the threshold of normal human awareness.

— Advertisements shall not state or imply that foods, food substitutes, appetite depressants or special devices will enable a person to lose weight or girth except in conjunction with a balanced, calorie-controlled diet; and the part played by such a diet shall be given due prominence in the advertisement.

— Advertisements shall not display a disregard for public safety or depict situations which might encourage inappropriate, unsafe or dangerous practices.

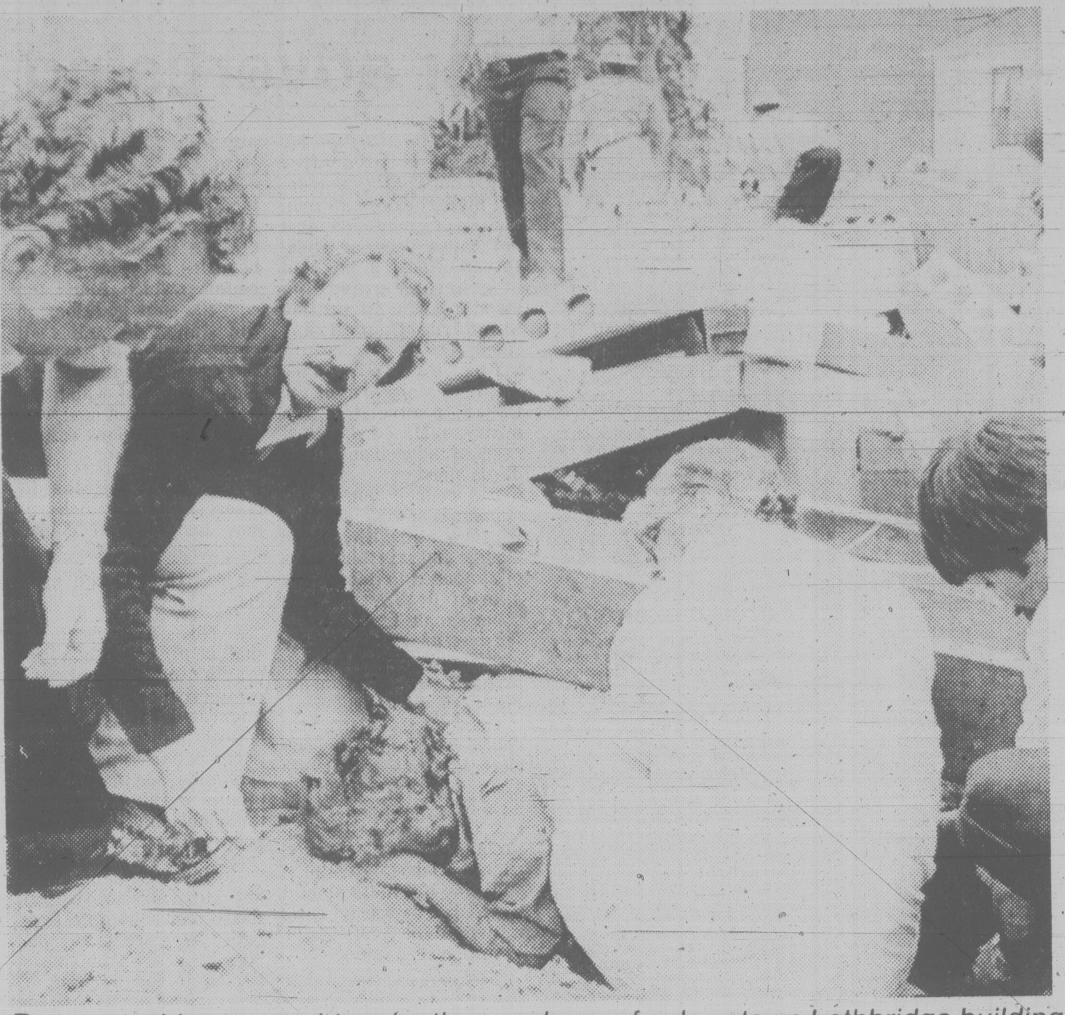
Town stunned in Lethbridge building collapse



Rescuers aid man caught under the wreckage of a downtown Lethbridge building

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — A modest three-storey building that was to have been an architect's showpiece collapsed Thursday into a tangled mass of twisted steel and concrete slabs, killing three men, severely injuring several others and stunning this small southern Alberta city.

Even after the dust settled, one horrified witness said: "You could still hear them screaming."

Also dead in the tragedy were the dreams and ambitions of two families that operated the small construction firm involved.

The cause of the collapse was not known, but officials said they want to check reports that a worker had been loosening supporting cables. Walls had not been installed and the building's concrete floors were supported by girders, with cables as cross supports.

City worker Joe Grodzitcky said: "They started to take the cables off, the cables that hold the steel together. They took off one above the ditch — it was all right — but when they took the second one, I heard it crack and the building was coming down." Grodzitcky escaped unhurt from under tons of concrete covering the ditch where he had been working on sewer and water lines for the building.

After the initial shock, city residents rallied quickly to comfort neighbors and help their hard-pressed police and firemen with everything from mobile cranes to hot coffee.

Det. Sgt. Irvin Leishner of the city police paid tribute to volunteers who transformed a condemned nearby wooden house — once a YWCA residence — into an eating place, stocked with hundreds of hamburgers from city restaurants.

Leishner said Lethbridge had no detailed plan for such a disaster — "we just set up our own." About 25 per cent of the city's 80-man police force and 90-man fire department took part in the rescue.

The dead, all from Lethbridge, were: Fred Crane, 56-year-old partner in Earl and Crane Construction Ltd.; David Stevens, 52, of Fooks and Johnstone Architects Ltd.; and Ray Ellis, 45, of Gilette Construction, the foundation contractors.

Among the severely injured were Crane's partner, Franklin Earl, and Steven's 17-year-old son Robert. Guisto Ficiub, 44, was also in hospital in serious condition.

Three city employees shielded by a trench in which they were checking natural gas, sewer and water connections suffered only moderate injuries.

"All I heard was a great cracking and we just dived right down in the hole," said Reid Anderson, whose two co-workers had to remain near a ruptured gas line until rescued.

For the architects, the tragic irony was even worse: only the previous day the local newspaper ran a feature story about the building, which was to have been a showpiece for glass-fibre reinforced concrete, an English invention not yet in common use in North America. The novel type of concrete, to be used in exterior panels, had not yet been installed, however.

Foreign cash 'vital' to oil development

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

CALGARY (CP) — Large foreign investments will be needed if Canada is to regain self-sufficiency in oil by about 1990, vice-chairman Stanley Davison of the Bank of Montreal said this week.

Speaking to an accountants' convention, Davison said such a massive energy-development program "will also require significant imports from the United States and abroad of special equipment and expertise."

"Any attempt to go it alone would soon put us up against supply bottlenecks and severe inflationary pressures."

Altogether, oil self-sufficiency by 1990 would require between $200 billion and $300 billion, with other energy projects in that decade requiring an extra $100 billion.

Davison estimated that Canadian sources could provide 75 per cent of those needs, assuming that real economic growth averages three per cent a year.

That left 25 per cent for foreign investors, more than double the 10 per cent that they provided for Canadian energy development in the last decade.

Predicting that such amounts can be attracted from abroad if Ottawa is not "too nationalistic," Davison added that Canada can afford to rely on foreign capital:

"During the period of rapid development of energy resources, we should not look askance if borrowing and financing from abroad flows into Canada in large amounts.

"The development process should lead to an expansion of the country's earning base, enabling us to service and repay over time the increased debt."

Davison's theme won endorsement from president Bill Richards of Dome Petroleum Ltd., a Canadian-owned company that is leading Beaufort Sea oil exploration.

Chauvinism is a "dangerous notion," Richards told members of the Society of Management Accountants.

So great is the energy-development task, he said, that foreign capital and foreign-owned firms cannot be excluded — all elements of the oil industry are needed, "even Petro-Canada."

Davison, meanwhile, said the amount of Canadian investment capital available could be increased if the federal government reduced its borrowing.

Ottawa, he said, borrows more than $1 billion a month — $14 billion a year, $140 billion for the decade if that rate is maintained.

The Bank of Montreal spokesman stressed that availability of energy capital depends on proper price and tax incentives:

"No matter what, on any investment project there has to be an apparent return to the entrepreneur sufficient to allow him to take the risks and to pay a competitive interest rate or the project will not go ahead."

If prices for domestic oil are held below world levels, he warned, "then some projects will no longer be economically viable unless, as it has done in the past, the government devises subsidy programs, andallows very high depletion allowances. . .".

Protesters critical of Salvador coverage

MONTREAL (CP) — About 30 demonstrators quietly occupied the newsroom of La Presse, Montreal's second-largest daily newspaper, on Thursday to protest what they called inadequate and slanted coverage of political turmoil in El Salvador.

The demonstrators — immigrants from El Salvador, Chile, Peru and Ecuador, as well as native Quebecers — handed out statements and met with Claude St. Laurent, La Presse's assistant news editor, to discuss their complaints.

Organizer Margarita Sandborn, a member of El Salvador's Popular Revolutionary Bloc, said the demonstrators wanted to make the newspaper aware of "the lack of information and the deformation of news" on the strife-torn Central American country, directing their criticism against all the media, print and electronic, and particularly the American agencies."

Drought curbs grain harvest

WINNIPEG (CP) — About 418 million bushels of wheat will be harvested on the Prairies this year, a decrease of 32 per cent from 1979, the Pioneer Grain Company Ltd. predicted Thursday.

The sharp decline is "due to the very serious drought conditions that have been experienced in most of Saskatchewan and Manitoba this spring," the company said in its first crop production report for 1980.

Recent rain will be helpful for some later sown crops, rapeseed in particular, Pioneer said, adding that it came too late to boost yields of most cereal crops.

Barley production, predicted to be 348 million bushels, will be down only slightly from the 1979 total because more acres were seeded, the company said.

Pioneer also said farmers would harvest 363 million bushels of spring wheat, 33 per cent less than 1979; 48 million of durum, down 28 per cent; 75 million of oats, down 44 per cent; 6.4 million of rye, down 64 per cent; 14 million of flax, down 57 per cent and 84 million of rapeseed, down 44 per cent.

Total crop production, predicted to be 22.5 million tonnes, will be down 28 per cent from last year's level of 31.3 million tonnes, the company said.

Drunk tanks accredited?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Medical Association wants to extend its hospital accreditation program to cover prison hospitals and clinics and police drunk tanks, association executive-director Dr. Norman Rigby said.

Rigby said the BCMA board is studying the proposal and will report on it Sept. 15.

"These facilities are now under the jurisdiction of the attorney-general of B.C.," Rigby said.

Import drop nets surplus in trade

OTTAWA (CP) — Purchases of imported goods dropped more sharply in May than did exports of domestic goods, resulting in a balance-of-payments surplus of $578 million in merchandise trade, Statistics Canada reported today.

Exports of passenger cars, trucks, oil, natural gas and metallic ores all declined sharply, due in part to the recession in the United States, Canada's most important trading partner.

The over-all drop in exports, adjusted for seasonal variations, was 6.4 per cent, following a 3.2-per-cent decline in April.

However, imports dropped off even more sharply, by 16 per cent, pushing the trade balance into a surplus from a deficit of $48 million in April.

A general slump in sales abroad of cars, trucks, other vehicles, and auto parts continued to be the main reason for declining exports.

Sales of passenger cars abroad did increase seven per cent to $320 million following a 13.5-per-cent decrease in April from March, but the monthly gain was more than offset by continued weaknesses in other parts of the automotive industry.

Exports of trucks and other motor vehicles fell 24 per cent to $165 million while exports of automotive parts fell 15.4 per cent to $245 million.

Demand for farm machinery, which had fallen off in the previous three months because of the U.S. recession and the U.S. embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union, picked up in May. Exports of farm machinery were up eight per cent to $85 million.

Other raw materials showing export declines were metallic ores, down 30 per cent to $130 million, and natural gas down 17 per cent to $295 million.

However, exports of crude oil increased eight per cent to $260 million following an 11-per-cent decrease in April from March.

There were modest increases in foreign demand for chemicals, woodpulp, lumber, food, beverages, tobacco and animal feed.

On the other side of the ledger, there was a sharp drop in imports of crude and fabricated materials.

Leading these was a drop of 19 per cent to $550 million in crude oil imports. Coal imports, which more than doubled in April, dropped back again 51 per cent to $80 million.

Fabricated material imports dropped by one-third, or $445 million to $900 million.

Non-ferrous metal imports were down 52 per cent to $160 million, followed by drops in chemical imports, down 25 per cent to $250 million and iron and steel imports, down 17 per cent to $115 million.

Declines in imports of finished products were less sharp, led by a drop of 7.4 per cent to $1.06 billion in imports of foreign cars, trucks and parts.

Backdown hinted on nuclear pressure

OTTAWA (CP) — Flora MacDonald, former external affairs minister, suggested Thursday that Canada has agreed to soften pressure on Argentina to honor nuclear safeguards in exchange for a write-off on financial losses incurred by a Crown corporation in selling that country a nuclear reactor six years ago.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde responded in the Commons by saying Argentina may be willing to reconsider some of the costs of the nuclear project, but he emphasized he is not aware of any discussions that would affect safeguards.

Miss MacDonald asked whether there was any discussion with Argentine officials to lessen safeguards in exchange for a write-offs of financial losses incurred by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. as a result of the 1974 sale.

When Lalonde replied that there have been no discussions about lessening safeguard demands from Argentina or any other country, Miss MacDonald took another stab at the question.

She asked whether there have been any changes in the original agreement with Argentina that would lead to a write-off on condition that Canada agree not to be insistent that Argentina sign a non-proliferation treaty.

At that point Lalonde said Argentine officials a few months ago in Canada said that country was ready to review a provision of the contract to reimburse the corporation for "additional expenses."

In addition, he said, the officials expressed interest in buying more reactors in the future.

Confusion over livestock aid

WINNIPEG (CP) — Confusion over a disjointed federal-provincial effort to help livestock producers through the Prairie drought took another turn Thursday with the announcement of a $60-million relief program by the federal government.

The program, announced simultaneously in Yorkton, Sask., by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and in Winnipeg by Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy, is aimed at preventing panic selling of feed-short breeding herds and dairy cattle.

To help maintain those herds, the federal government will pay farmers in the hardest hit areas up to $70 for a beef cow or bull, a maximum of $140 for a dairy cow and $16 for a ewe or ram.

"I think it's a great encouragement," said Al Church, general manager of the Manitoba Cattle Producers Association. "But it doesn't create feed. That's something only God can do."

Confusion over the unco-ordinated drought relief effort arose when Manitoba Agriculture Minister James Downey told a news conference he was under the impression some of the $60 million would be used to cost-share a $40-million provincial feed assistance program.

Axworthy, on the other hand, told his news conference the province wouldn't get a cent of the money.

Whelan couldn't be reached for clarification, but Roger Baldwin of Regina, co-ordinator of the federal program, wasn't as definite as Axworthy in his interpretation of the relief effort.

Baldwin, referring to recent discussions between Downey and Whelan, said that while he is unaware of any formal agreement on a cost-sharing plan, the door hasn't been closed.

"I suppose, depending on the circumstances, some of the $60 million could be made available later on. But right now we're estimating that the herd maintenance assistance program is going to take a very large proportion of the $60 million."

The program was generally welcomed by Downey and his counterpart in Saskatchewan, Gordon MacMurchy.

Payments to livestock producers, calculated using a complicated formula, vary with the amount of damage caused by drought in a particular region.

The maximums apply where the 1980 average crop yield in a township is less than 50 per cent of the normal crop insurance guarantee of production. No payments will be made to producers where crop yields exceed 75 per cent.

Road fatalities take biggest rise in seven years

OTTAWA (UPC) — Motor vehicle accidents killed almost 5,900 people on Canada's roads last year, an increase of 7.6 per cent over 1978 and the largest year-to-year increase in seven years, Transport Canada announced Thursday.

However, although 5,839 died in accidents across the country, the figure is still lower than the 1973 record high of 6,706 road fatalities.

The department said during the five-year federal-provincial road safety program from 1973 to 1978, including tougher drinking-driving laws and mandatory seat belts in four provinces, the death rate from motor vehicle crashes dropped 13 per cent.

The province with the worst driving record was Quebec, which recorded 1,778 road deaths while Canada's most populous province, Ontario, registered 1,560 fatalities.

Quebec's rate of increase, however, dropped by 0.7 per cent during the year compared with 1978.

Newfoundland, with 108 deaths, and Alberta's 692 gave those provinces the highest rate increases in the year-to-year basis. Respectively, the two provinces had percentage rises of 45.9 and 37.8.

The Yukon Territory, which reported a 44 per cent increase in road fatalities over the previous three years, saw its 14 deaths mark a 12.5 per cent decline last year.

The Northwest Territories, with its sparse population, recorded the fewest number of deaths with six in 1979. Next came Prince Edward Island with 33.

Other provinces to see significant drops in their vehicle accident death rate were Nova Scotia, with a 17.1 per cent decrease, and Manitoba. The latter recorded 13.1 per cent decline.

65 dealerships going in Chrysler realty sale

TORONTO (CP) — More than $94 million worth of car dealerships, parts depots and vacant land has been put up for sale by Chrysler Canada Ltd.

The financially troubled automaker has signed an agreement giving A.E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto exclusive rights to sell the property, the real estate company announced Thursday.

The property, which the real estate company called "one of Canada's most extensive real estate investment portfolios," includes 65 dealership facilities and five regional parts depots as well as several pieces of vacant land.

J. Harvey Wright, senior vice-president of LePage's national investment division, said he expects "considerable interest in the offering because of the limited supply of well-situated, prime investment properties such as these currently available in Canada."

Hot winds fan flames

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The worst possible conditions — hot, windy and dry — continued to fuel runaway forest fires in northwestern Ontario today and the weatherman says there is no rain in sight.

Besides consuming valuable forest land, the fires have exhausted manpower and supplies.

John Carrington of the Ontario ministry of natural resources said the provincial government was spending about $500,000 a day fighting the fires. So far the fires have cost $18 million in emergency funds — in addition to the regular $20-million budget.

Carrington said there were not enough trained people available, despite importing personnel from across the province. About 3,000 firefighters were trying to stop more than 60 fires burning in the province.

An additional 500 firefighters are being trained, but Carrington said they weren't expected to be ready for another week.

The fire situation is the worst in Ontario history, he said, with more than 1.3 million acres (526,000 hectares) lost and the fire season only just under way.

There were 64 helicopters, eight from the U.S., and 39 water bombers in service. Quebec and New Brunswick have provided pumps and hose. Fifteen specialists from Alaska and a nine-man team from Boise, Idaho, joined the fight this week.

Fire Thunder Bay 46 continues to burn about 150 kilometres north of Thunder Bay over an area of about 309,000 acres — or twice the size of Metropolitan Toronto.

The second largest fire in the province today was burning 250 kilometres northwest of Thunder Bay. Called Ignace 27, the 130,000 acre blaze started about 10 days ago.

To make things worse, the Ignace district reported an incredible 223 lightning strikes from a storm that passed over late Wednesday. Ministry officials say they don't know how many new fires started as a result of the strikes.

While the fire continues to destroy millions of dollars worth of timber, ministry officials said there are no communities in direct danger.

However, there were no plans to return the 350 citizens of the Indian community of Gull Bay to their homes.

The native people, who were taken to Thunder Bay more than a week ago, were living in a tent-trailer setup in a Thunder Bay park.

Federal Indian Affairs Minister John Munro said Thursday the Gull Bay residents will receive financial aid to offset costs incurred from the evacuation.

Soviet help sought

WEST BERLIN (Reuter) — The West Berlin government has appealed to the Soviet Union for information to help it prepare criminal charges against 300 Jews suspected of settling in the city with forged papers, a spokesman said.

Yukon quake only an ice-tinkler

WHITEHORSE (CP) — It's official — a small earthquake shook the southern Yukon area this week.

The Alaska Tsunami Warning Centre at Palmer, near Anchorage, says the quake registered 4.3 on the Richter scale at 6:09 p.m. Wednesday.

There was no property damage, but the six-second tremor rattled dinner tables and tinkled the ice in cocktails arounds the Yukon capital.

The warning centre said the quake was centred at a point about 125 kilometres southeast of Whitehorse.

Strangely, there were no reports of having felt the tremor in Carcross or Haines Junction, the communities closest to the epicentre.

It was the Yukon's first measurable earthquake since February, 1979, when a jolt registering 7.9 on the Richter scale rattled the area.

WHY
SMOKE?

If you're a smoker, you know that smoking a cigarette can be one of those rare and pleasurable moments.

And the chances are you don't want to give up any of that, even if you are becoming more and more concerned about smoking.

Which brings us to Vantage.

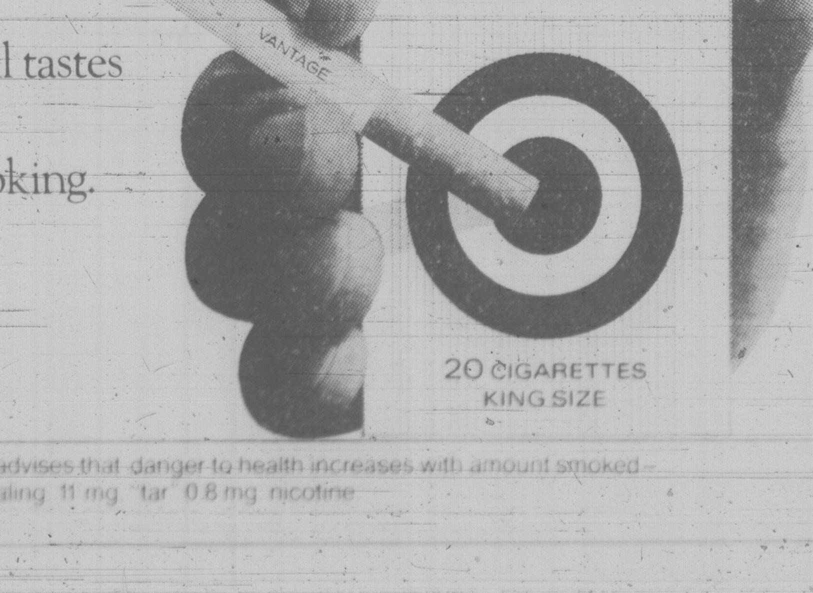
Vantage is the cigarette for people who may have had second thoughts about smoking and are looking for a way to do something about it.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

Think of the pleasure of smoking.
Think Vantage.



Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked — avoid inhaling. 11 mg "tar" 0.8 mg nicotine

Socred leaps to Davidson defence

By JAKE BANKY

Socred backbencher Peter Hyndman (Vancouver South) sprang to the defence of acting Speaker Walter Davidson Thursday, demanding that NDP house leader Frank Howard (Skeena) be found in contempt of the legislature.

Davidson took Hyndman's motion under advisement.

Howard had accused Davidson of showing a pro-government partiality because he rejected the request by Bob Skelly (NPD—Alberni) for a special legislative committee to consider a question of privilege.

Hyndman told the house Howard should be found guilty of breach of privilege and contempt.

His reasoning: "That he (Howard) did wrongfully reflect on Mr. Speaker by accusations of partiality, impropriety and unfairness in the discharge of his duties."

Outside the house, Hyndman said Davidson had worked hard to establish a reputation for impartiality and to accuse him of showing bias was unfair and untrue.

"The best solution for all concerned would be for the member from Skeena to apologize to the Speaker for remarks which were intemperate and perhaps are now regretted," he said.

Howard said he would wait for Davidson's ruling before commenting.

Skelly had asked for a committee on privilege to examine a statement attributed to him in the Socred caucus newsletter Government Reports.

He claims it is a deliberate misrepresentation and constitutes a breach of privilege.

Davidson ruled Skelly's motion out of order Wednesday on a technicality — that it was not brought before the legislature at the earliest opportunity.

Howard said he had met with Davidson to advise him that Skelly had just become aware of the statement in the newsletter and that, therefore, it was being raised at the earliest opportunity.

"I'm suggesting that Mr. Speaker has a greater sensitivity to the interests of the government side of the house than he does to the proprieties of the house itself," Howard charged angrily.

Hyndman said he defended Davidson because the Speaker — like a judge — is not in a good position to defend himself.

"If members of this house don't start working to improve its image, the legislature is going to get worse, not better," Hyndman said. "If we're going to improve the B.C. legislature, we have to start by protecting our speaker."

No more Disco at local Safeways

Safeway has dropped the Disco name in Victoria, a company spokesman said Friday.

Georgina Bullen said the four stores had gradually changed into regular Safeway stores.

The Disco subsidiary was developed in the 1970s as an experiment in low-price, no-service marketing but it did not win long-term acceptance, she said.

The first Discos displayed goods in the cardboard boxes they were delivered in. Customers packed their own groceries.

The novelty of the approach wore off and in the late 1970s and in 1980 it became clear most customers preferred some service and more-attractive surroundings.

Purse-grabbers strike twice

City police are searching for suspects following two separate purse-snatching incidents near Beacon Hill Park Thursday.

The first occurred at 2:24 p.m. and involved a 71-year-old woman who was attacked by two youths as she walked on Heywood Avenue.

A police spokesman said Mrs. Agnes Perry was knocked to the ground and had her purse, containing $120 in Canadian funds and $20 in U.S. money, wrenched from her hand.

She was taken to Victoria General Hospital where she was treated for a broken little finger and strained back and later released.

The purse was discovered in the baseball diamond in the park and the wallet, with the money missing, recovered floating in a nearby pond.

In the second incident, at 8:38 p.m., a lone youth stopped a woman taking a short-cut through St. Ann's Academy and asked her for the time.

As Charmain Crittenden looked at her watch the youth snatched her purse and ran off.

Officers found the purse discarded in bush on Humboldt Street about 50 feet away. A change purse was missing but the thief overlooked a wallet containing $32 cash.

B.C. eyes change in libel legislation

B.C. is considering legislation which would protect a newspaper from libel action over letters to the editor.

The protection would apply when when it could be shown the letter writer honestly held the opinion expressed.

Manitoba already has such legislation.

Such legislation would not protect the letter writer from libel action and if an editor knew the contents to be untrue, the newspaper could still be sued.

Responding to questions by Stu Leggatt (NDP — Coquitlam-Port Moody), Attorney-General Allan Williams said several provinces have followed Manitoba's lead.

Dr. Glenn Manning wins PFRC post

Dr. Glenn Manning has been appointed program manager of forest economics at the Pacific Forest Research Centre on West Burnside Road.

He succeeds Dr. Michael Massie who left the PFRC in 1978 to join a local consulting firm.

Gordon E. Miller has been appointed to the position of forest entomologist in the cone and seed insect study area. He replaces Alan Hedlin who recently retired after 22 years with the Canadian Forestry Service.

City police dispute

Greater Victoria policemen are going public in their current contract dispute.

Victorians will be hearing a pitch from the police on radio and reading ads in the newspapers over the next few days.

Spokesman Dave MacIntyre says two points will be made.

First, that the Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt police boards have abdicated their responsibility.

And second, that no matter what job action the policemen take, emergency services will be provided.

Federal coal offer not new: Phillips

The $300 million offer of federal investment in a northeast coal deal — announced with great fanfare in Ottawa — contains nothing new, Industry Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

However it is the first official notice the province has received of Ottawa's commitment, he said.

The federal government is promising $39 million towards construction of a coal terminal at Ridley Island at Prince Rupert, $4 million towards an access road to Ridley Island, $72 million to improve the CNR main line, $90 million for new rolling stock and a further $50 million for improvements to the CN's plant capacity.

Phillips, meanwhile, remains optimistic about a northeast coal deal despite the return of coal company negotiators from Tokyo without a contract.

"I didn't anticipate the coal companies would go over there and come right back with a signed contract," he said.

The minister considers encouraging the mere fact that negotiations remain open.

"They weren't sent packing, which could have happened. The Japanese could have said, 'You're asking too much for your coal, thank you very much, and we'll deal with the Australians.'

"So the bargaining will proceed. This is normal business procedure."

Phillips intends to meet with the coal company negotiators Monday to hear first-hand what happened at the Japan bargaining table.

He refused to comment on reports that the companies were seeking $84 a ton for northeast coal while the Japanese were offering $64 a ton.

Victoria man dead

Albert G. (Henry) Hawkins, former circulation manager of The Daily Colonist, died of a heart attack on Wednesday while holidaying in the English city of Worthing.

Hawkins, 86, was born in London, Eng. in 1894 and came to Victoria in October 1909.

He became a junior clerk in the newspaper's circulation department in November of that year and served as circulation manager for many years before his retirement about 50 years later.

He is survived by his wife Lillian, two stepdaughters and two stepsons, and his brother, Stanley, in Victoria.

No aid planned for fishermen

OTTAWA (CP) — While B.C. fishermen are in for a poor year financially, they aren't looking for handouts from the federal treasury, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Thursday.

He said in meetings with B.C. fishermen last week, he heard requests for federal help to get mortgage payments on boats adjusted to the poor financial conditions.

"They were not looking for subsidies."

He was responding to Margaret Mitchell, NDP MP for Vancouver East, who told the Commons fisheries committee that 1980 was shoping up as a dreadful year for fishermen.

A strike during the herring season, a poor salmon run this summer and generally lower prices for most fish species would result in incomes well below last year.

She asked if the federal government was planning compensation for the fishermen.

Leblanc said that 1980 was widely predicted to be a mediocre year for salmon and even if there had been a herring fishery, prices would have been well below last year's inflated levels.

"However the herring strike may have been an act of Providence for conservation purposes," the minister said.

Project funded

Nanaimo's Malaspina College has been given a $9,000 grant by the B.C. education ministry to study the feasibility of building a commercial-size greenhouse designed specially for cool climates.

If the project proves feasible, the greenhouse would be built at Cedar, 11 kilometres south of here, where Tamagawa University of Tokyo owns farmland.

The study will involve research in Japan and different parts of North America.

Before the judge

A 42-year-old man was sentenced in provincial court Thursday to three years in jail for indecently assaulting a 10-year-old girl.

Judge Lorne Pearce said he would strongly recommend that Robert Lorne McRae, 334 Goldstream, be classified immediately to the Matsqui unit for sexual offenders.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said McRae and his wife invited the girl to spend a weekend with them last March and both had been drinking and viewing pornographic films one morning.

The child, who had been sleeping on a couch, was awakened and brought into the couple's bedroom where the films continued, some sex acts performed with the victim and intercourse attempted before the couple engaged in intercourse in front of the child.

McRae had been convicted of two counts of child abduction in June of 1975 in London, Ont., and was given a suspended sentence and two years probation.

A 21-year-old man charged in the death of his mother was remanded until next Friday.

Michael John Schilling, 515 Linden, is charged with the June 23 first-degree murder of 46-year-old Sylvia May Barlow, whose body was found June 25 in her apartment at the University Park Terrace apartments at 1870 McKenzie.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith told Judge Blake Allan the preliminary hearing is expected to take three days but it is not possible to schedule the hearing until next week.

A 19-year-old former Saanich resident was given consecutive jail terms of two months and seven days for assault causing bodily harm and possession of a weapon.

Judge Pearce said he would recommend Zeljko Stubljar, now of Calgary, serve his sentence in a forestry camp.

Stubljar and 21-year-old Peter James Amell, 1204 Yates, beat a 15-year-old student of Lambrick Park school June 4.

The incident took place about 3:15 p.m. outside the school and Stubljar, whose nickname was given as Shotgun, used his fists and kicked the victim, who suffered a broken jaw and other injuries.

"We're all sick and tired of this kind of conduct," Judge Allan said before giving an 18-year-old three concurrent, 10-day jail terms.

Robert James Kazmiruk, 1215 Queens, pleaded guilty to three counts of mischief causing wilful damage.

Smith said Kazmiruk broke a $132 plate glass window at the A and W, 1921 Oak Bay, about 1 a.m. June 14 and then walked along both sides of the street, tearing out two garbage containers and kicking and jumping on them, causing another $80 damage.

Kazmiruk returned to the A and W and told Oak Bay police officers he ran out of gas in the parking lot, was angry and wanted to take out his frustrations.

Defence lawyer Catherine Hough said Kazmiruk now says he accidentally broke the window by swinging his arm.

Allan noted he recently said he would "come down heavily" on such acts.

He placed Kazmiruk on 12 months probation and ordered him to make restitution to the restaurant and the city.

A 19-year-old charged with robbery with violence was released on $1,000 surety or cash bail but was ordered to obey a 10 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. curfew.

Glenn Blaine Schall, who gave Victoria police no fixed address, was charged in connection with an early-morning incident Thursday on the Causeway in which 29-year-old Arthur Warren Jahn was confronted by three youths and beaten with a stick. Jahn also had his watch and other jewelry stolen.

Schall was remanded until July 17 for election of his trial method.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Norbert William Ashmore, 45, of 3188 Albina, $500; Gerald William Tamburri, 49, of 2866 Inez, $400; and William Ronald James, 27, of 3386 Veteran, $50.

In addition, Ashmore was fined $200 for failing to remain at an accident and James was ordered to perform 36 hours of community service work.

Saanich move bothers judge

Covenant removal rezoning?

A B.C. Supreme Court judge said Thursday he was troubled by the action of Saanich council in removing a restrictive covenant on Tillicum shopping centre without holding a public hearing.

Mr. Justice John Bouck was commenting during a chambers hearing at which Saanich is asking him to set aside an injunction obtained by the Capital Regional District halting expansion of the centre to 495,000 square feet.

A covenant had restricted the size of the shopping centre on the site of the former Tillicum Drive-in Theatre to 295,000 square feet, which Saanich removed by means of a bylaw.

The developers intended to add an Eaton's department store to the project.

Rodney Taylor, counsel for Saanich, said the municipality held a public hearing April 30 to consider a bylaw to rezone the land use from drive-in theatre to commercial shopping centre, without a reference to the proposed size.

Those people attending the hearing would know, Taylor said, that there would be matters involving the sole discretion of the municipality before the deal was concluded. These people have no part in the legislative process and are there only to provide input to their elected representatives who must make the decision, he said.

The reference to 295,000 square feet was in the developer's application, he said.

"There was no demonstrated deceit on the part of anyone speaking to the public hearing or presiding at it," Taylor said.

"Oh, no. I agree with that," Bouck replied.

"My difficulty is whether removal of a restrictive convenant is a rezoning and requires another public hearing."

Only rezoning requires a public hearing, Taylor argued. The municipality has a statutory right to make restrictive covenants.

Bouck suggested that perhaps when it comes to a restrictive covenant on size, "you are into rezoning."

Taylor's answer to that was: only if a bylaw were conditional and in this matter there was no conditional zoning. Council had acted in good faith, he said.

The regional district is given broad-brush land-use powers, "the motherhood, quality-of-life provisions," Taylor said.

Its interests stop when it says a regional shopping centre shall be established at a given place, and the municipality takes on the details of planning from there.

Bouck adjourned the matter to July 31 at 10 a.m. when CRD counsel Don Farquhar will give a rebuttal.

The end of a bank caper

DUNCAN (CP) — Two would-be bank robbers, aged 13 and 16, admitted their delinquency and were sentenced in Duncan family court Thursday after being charged with attempted robbery.

The older boy was placed on probation until his 17th birthday. His younger partner had his case adjourned sine die, meaning adjourned forever.

The pair handed a note to an employee at a Bank of Montreal branch here March 7, and a staff member called RCMP. The youngsters fled but were caught in a poolroom.

RAW SEWAGE POOL is inspected by bacteriologist Marilyn Berry Grant, who says leaking effluent in Cordova Bay appears to have caused several cases of hepatitis. Septic tank problems may trigger an epidemic if Saanich or the Capital Region District do not take steps to inform the public of the health danger, she says. A sewer system planned for the area will take at least five years to install.

Family Relations Act loses again

The B.C. government intends to go to the Supreme Court of Canada to defend its Family Relations Act.

The B.C. Court of Appeal Thursday upheld a B.C. Supreme Court decision which found certain portions of the act invalid.

Attorney-General Allan Williams promptly announced he will seek leave to appeal that ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada as soon as possible.

The appeal court found the province has no authority to permit provincially-appointed judges to handle cases involving the guardianship, custody of, or access to, a child.

Provincial court judges are also barred from cases involving occupancy of, or restricted entry to a family residence.

The effect of this ruling is that such matters may be handled only by Supreme or County court judges, who are federally appointed.

"A Sherman tank has been driven through the government's Family Relations Act legislation," NDP critic Alex Macdonald told the legislature.

He criticized the Socred government for failing to refer the constitutional issue to the high court two years ago, to clear the matter up then.

"Literally thousands of families and children are now in a state of legal limbo and have to go through the Supreme Court at great expense," he said.

Macdonald demanded the government act immediately to rewrite its legislation, to make it constitutional.

"He could rewrite the legislation from now until Kingdom come," Williams replied, adding this still would not affect the court ruling that jurisdiction rests with federally-appointed judges.

The attorney-general pointed out that until the original B.C. Supreme Court ruling last October, provincially-appointed judges in this province had been exercising jurisdiction in such cases since 1962.

In some instances, their jurisdiction has been accepted since B.C. entered confederation, he said.

Williams also noted the appeal court ruling could have a serious impact on similar legislation in at least six other provinces.

In a sharp exchange with Macdonald, Williams denied that families are suffering as a result of the court ruling that a section of the Family Relations Act is invalid.

Since the ruling in October, all such cases have been handled efficiently through the Supreme Court, he said.

Stewart road link restored at last

STEWART, B.C. (CP) — A road link to this north coast community was restored early today when work crews completed construction of a two-section Bailey bridge to replace a 91-metre span that burned Monday.

The new bridge came just in time. Adjacent Hyder, Alaska, had just started its Fourth of July celebrations.

Chuck Hurrell, a provincial highways spokesman, said the temporary bridge opened shortly after midnight.

Vandals smash four vehicles

About $10,000 damage was caused early today when vandals released the brakes of four vehicles parked on a steep hill on Harriet.

A Saanich police spokesman said a resident awoke about 4 a.m. to the sound of his van crashing into a power pole at Harriet and Crease.

When police arrived they found a jeep smashed into a signpost at the same intersection and two other cars resting in the front yards of homes further up the block.

In other traffic mishaps, about $4,000 damage was done when a pick-up van skidded on rain-slicked pavement at Blanshard and Cloverdale at noon Thursday and smashed into a utility pole.

The pole toppled on a new Cadillac driven by Ian Anderson of 1827 Jade causing minor damage.

The driver of the van, Darrel Curtis Saby, 25, of 3210 Wicklow, was taken to hospital with minor scrapes and released after treatment.

The mishap tied up traffic at the busy intersection for nearly an hour.

Police said about $3,000 damage was done to the pole, $1,000 to the pickup and $200 to the Cadillac.

Ucluelet 'pillar' jailed a year for trafficking

A man described as a pillar of Ucluelet was sentenced in county court today to a year in jail for possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

James Michael Mullin, 36, had pleaded guilty to the charge arising from surveillance of a postal box at Sooke March 16, 1978. Police recovered two ounces of 80 per-cent-pure cocaine with a street value of $27,000.

Judge M.L.T. Drake said Mullin should have known better.

Defence lawyer Michael Hutchison said the sentence will be appealed.

He told the judge the act was an "aberative single flight away from normal character" of his client, who for 2½ years had earned himself a position of respect in the west coast fishing village.

Mullin had no previous drug record and an "unblemished, perhaps noble character," Hutchison said.

The number of character witnesses from a cross-section of lifestyles, including Mullin's common-law wife Linda Baril, his employer Jim Georgeson, and co-worker Ian MacKenzie, gave the accused exemplary references which were accepted by the court.

Mullin had become a responsible family man, foreman of his employer's shipyard, and had made many contributions to the community.

He is a teacher of celestial navigation, an active member of the community arts society and wildlife organization and founder of the first ecological society on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Hutchison described the offence as an impetuous adventure by one who had permitted himself to become involved with friends in securing the drug, which was mailed from South America, where Mullin had served in the Peace Corps before becoming a landed Canadian immigrant.

Tourist decline 'misleading'

A 30-per-cent drop in number of tourists on the Seattle-Victoria run shouldn't be considered a failure for the local travel industry, tourist consultant Ken Stratford said today.

He said the statistics, released by the government Thursday, could be misleading.

For example, he said the number of tourists who made the run last month is on par with the number who took the trip in June, 1978, and that was one of the best tourist years Victoria has ever had.

Stratford said he was concerned about the impact "people playing the numbers game" may have on the industry.

"That kind of negative thinking feeds on itself."

Stratford said there was only one meaningful statistic — the number of dollars tourists are spending when they arrive here.

He felt the 1979 jump in number of tourists may have been largely due to rumors it would be the last year the Marguerite would be on the run.

"I'm happier to see lower numbers coming in, provided we are getting better spending tourists and I think we are."

Stratford said the decline in tourists this year over last is the result of several factors including the Mount St. Helen's eruption, the poor weather, and the dismal state of the U.S. economy.

But despite those handicaps, he said, if the tourist trade continues at the same pace as 1978 — and there are clear indications it will — the industry will thrive in Victoria.

Alan Alda and James Jay Rubinfier won the $10,000 prize for an half-hour show for the Dreams episode of the CBS series M-A-S-H. The jury said that show was honored for "its dramatization of the utter absurdity of war and of any attempt to subordinate people to impersonal systems.

Workaholic Nimoy still as busy as ever

By PETE JACOBS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Leonard Nimoy, who rocketed to stardom as the pointy-eared Mr. Spock of TV's Star Trek, says he never expected to make a lot of money as an actor.

"My only hope was to make enough money to support myself," said the 48-year-old Nimoy in a recent interview, recalling the decade when he was struggling to support himself through acting alone.

Nimoy remains an obsessive worker. After more than 100 performances of his one-man play, Vincent, he was still revising cues and tuning the script by Phillip Stevens about the tormented artist Vincent Van Gogh.

As a struggling young actor, Nimoy said it was a belief that he had something to offer that kept him going.

"In that sense I have a tremendous identification with Vincent because I really believe that he believed that he had something to offer and that he wanted to give it," Nimoy said.

He continues to win cheers for his portrayal of the artist through the central character Theo, who financially and emotionally supported his brother Vincent and died a year after the artist.

Reading from Van Gogh's letters, Theo tells the story of the artist's life, a soliloquy-like performance in which Theo at times offers something of an apology for Van Gogh's eccentricity, but demands acceptance from the world.

"If a poet touches your soul, he gives you a sense of universal connection with the rest of mankind," Theo says. "Must he have proper table manners as well?"

Nimoy, who has starred in such roles as Twelfth Night, Fiddler on the Roof and Man in the Glass Booth, greets each audience as a unique stranger with whom he must learn to communicate.

"I think it is the arts in our lives that enrich our lives and make us feel better about ourselves," he said.

And although he acknowledged he now is financially independent enough to reject scripts he does not like, he said he finds it hard to slow his pace.

Here's a logical vehicle of horror

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — So you thought all the horror movie vehicles had been used up?

What, after all, is left after demonic possession, black masses, monsters, vampires, mummies, werewolves, cemeteries and haunted houses?

Until now a very substantial vehicle remained untouched — The Hearse — which just happens to be the title of a new chiller starring Trish Van Devere, Joseph Cotten and a chariot of death.

Van Devere plays a disoriented school teacher who lives in a disquieting old mansion and begins to doubt her sanity when a mysterious, apparently driverless hearse begins to track her down.

The black, sinister funeral car chases her down deserted stretches of road, pays her a midnight call and crashes into her automobile.

As the school teacher, Van Devere doesn't know whether she is imagining her encounters with the foreboding hearse or if the sinister car is really out to get her. She devotes most of the picture avoiding becoming a corpse in the back of her pursuer.

Audiences may or may not be able to suspend their credulity over such goings-on. A somewhat similar movie, The Car, was made with James Brolin chased by an extra-terrestral auto. It bombed.

But this is an era of horror movies, psychological thrillers and science-fiction stories, most of whichs are box-office hits.

Last year, comic implications notwithstanding, Love at First Bite — a Dracula epic — became the largest grossing movie in the history of American International Pictures, followed closely by The Amityville Horror.

Neither one, to be sure, was a classic, but they were and are indicative of what movie-goers want to see.

This year Friday The 13th and The Fog are reaping gold. And in the past year or two such others as Don't Answer the Phone, The Fifth Floor, Halloween, When a Stranger Calls and Don't Go in the House have prospered.

One of the most expensive horror films of them all, The Shining, starring Jack Nicholson, is currently filling theaters.

Horror films often turn a profit because they are inexpensive to make. They customarily feature a single major character, trapped in a relatively confined area, placed in great jeopardy from an unknown but terrifying source.

What sort of person enjoys being scared half to death in a dark movie theater?

Trish Van Devere for one. She loves starring in horror movies as well as watching them. Her only previous horror film was The Changeling in which she co-starred with husband George C. Scott.

Better than seeing frightening films in theaters, she likes to curl up in bed at night, turn off the lights and watch such golden oldies as Diabolique on the late, late show.

She's a discriminating horror buff, however, and prefers the psychological mysteries to the blood and gore, beheading-type films of the genre.

Trish also is horrified by the term "horror film." She calls them the scaries.

"I'm as much a sucker for the scaries as anybody," she said, giggling. "What I love about them is the immediacy of your involvement.

"Those pictures represent the best kind of escapism. The intellect needs a rest and the scaries are pure non-think. Whether you're really terrified, laughing at them or laughing at yourself for being involved, the scaries take your mind off other things.

"It's the same reason why mystery novels are popular, especially among intellectuals who usually spend their reading time with heavy literature. Mysteries provide an escape for them.

"I know my mother insisted that I read all the best books. Literature. But I'd take a Nancy Drew book to bed with me and read it by flashlight under the covers. It's the same sort of thing."

While acting in The Hearse and The Changeling, Trish managed to suspend her own sense of verisimilitude to create a true image of terror on film.

"You have to believe in the character and the situation yourself or the audience won't accept the characterization," she said. "As an actress I force myself to a heightened belief that the events in the story are actually taking place.

"It's not difficult for me to sustain emotional terror. Some actresses might find it so. Every actress has different responses to various emotions.

"I react easily to being startled or frightened. I jump involuntarily when the unexpected happens. I respond on a dramatic scale. When I first saw Diabolique 20 years ago as a kid in Tenafly (N.J.) I shrieked my head off.

"On camera I'm aware that everything is under control but the intuitive, creative part of my brain dominates the logical part. So when I scream because a hand grabs me by the throat, believe me, I'm really scared."

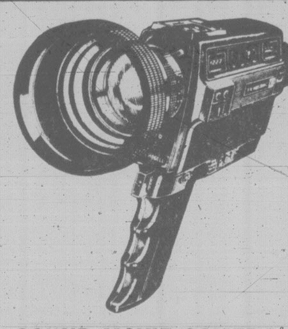
WIN A summerfunthing

Play it daily and be eligible to win weekly prizes. It's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions below . . .

THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

1st



SOUND MOVIE CAMERA

A CHILD'S GYM SET

3rd

"PUMP POT"

(5 to be won)

Pressured-powered Hot 'N' Cold Liquid Dispenser

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

15 years for purse-snatching possible in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The case of a purse-snatcher held in a New Brunswick mental institution for 15 years under a lieutenant-governor's warrant can be repeated in B.C., says Gerald Green, a lawyer and advocate for warrant patients.

There are about 140 warrant cases in B.C., most of whom are held in the Forensic Psychiatric Institute in nearby Port Coquitlam.

Green says there should be a connection between the duration of confinement and the seriousness of an offence but provincial authorities disagree.

"I feel we have one of the best systems in Canada," says Ray Nelson, criminal justice administrative officer with the provincial attorney-general's department.

Warrant patients are individuals who by reason of insanity are found not guilty or unfit to stand trial. They are committed to a mental institution, where they remain until a review board and the provincial cabinet decide to release them.

Judge H.S. Keenlyside and two psychiatrists make up B.C.'s review board. The board, says Nelson, examines patients' cases between the third and sixth month following admission, and about every nine months after that.

Of cases like the one in New Brunswick, Nelson said: "How do you put a time limit on mental illness? Some mental illness can be over in two weeks — some can go on for years."

The open-ended nature of the warrants system is necessary, said Nelson, and patients who feel they are held unjustly can appeal to Green.

"Unfortunately the provisions of the Criminal Code have the effect of putting most of these people beyond the reach of the courts," said Green.

He cited a number of problems he sees with the system:

— The duration of confinement is inadequately defined and patients could be held longer than is reasonable.

— Patients are not allowed the right of due process of law before the review board because they don't get a court-style hearing, and they and their lawyer have no access to their medical files.

— Patients have no right of cross-examination in review panel hearings.

— Decisions regarding warrant patients ultimately lie with cabinet ministers.

— Patients don't have the right to refuse medication.

"The whole purpose of the exercise is to release the person as soon as possible if it is considered in their and the community's best interest," said Keenlyside.

Lawyers, he said, have criticisms of the system, but are usually more interested in the case at hand than in whether the client will break the law again.

"If the program of release of these people is going to be (publicly) tolerated, there have to be few breakdowns," Keenlyside said.

He said patients who work at the institute do so for therapeutic value, to instil self-worth. It costs $75 to $100 a day to maintain patients, said Keenlyside.

New try for jail monitor

A video system recommended by a coroner's jury for monitoring prisoners in city police cells was one of the items cut from the 1980 budget, Chief William Snowdon said Thursday.

The chief's comments were prompted by a jury's findings Wednesday at the inquest into the death of Larry Martin Nelson, 42, who was found dead in the police drunk tank June 18.

Nelson had been taken to Victoria General Hospital the day before after being found unconscious in the Yates Street parkade.

When Nelson regained consciousness, hospital authorities called police to take him although he was still intoxicated.

A video system, the jury decided, would help the jailer monitor those in his custody.

Snowdon said a two-monitor system was considered, with one set at the jailer's position and another in the dispatcher's room.

The $3,000 system was cut from the budget, but Snowdon said it will now be reconsidered in light of the jury's recommendation.

The jury also recommended a breath test be performed on prisoners before release, and that a pathologist's testimony be heard first at an inquest to help the jury get a clearer view of circumstances surrounding a death.

Kemano II hearings promised

VANDERHOOF (CP) — A government review of the proposed Kemano II hydroelectric project will include public hearings in the affected communities, says Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

"The Kemano project will be the subject of a stringent inquiry and public hearings will be held in nearby communities," McClelland says in a letter to a weekly newspaper here.

Residents in the affected communities have opposed the project which would see the flow of the Nechako dropped 50 to 90 per cent between Fraser Lake and Prince George for an expanded hydro generating station at Kemano.

The station proposed by the Aluminum Co. of Canada would power a $2.5-billion smelter expansion at Kitimat, B.C.

In a letter to the Omineca Advertiser, the minister said in response to an editorial:

"The government realizes the carte blanche rights given Alcan in 1950 (for the original Kemano power plant) may not be in the interest of the area in the 1980s. Certain arrangements are necessary to ensure social and environmental impacts are minimized and economic benefits are maximized."

McClelland said guildelines for the project review are not in place but residents should not fear that Alcan will start the Kemano II project until the review process is complete.

Hydro chief heads CEA

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Olsen, president of B.C. Hydro, has been chosen new president of the Canadian Electrical Association.

Olsen, 56, has worked for Hydro since 1946 when he graduated from the University of B.C. with a bachelor of applied sciences degree.

The association is holding its annual meeting here.

Bank of Canada trying to fool public: Stevens

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada is trying to make Canadians think interest rates are lower than they actually are by decreasing the central bank rate tiny amounts every week, Sinclair Stevens, former Progressive Conservative treasury board president, said Thursday.

He made the comment after the bank rate dropped Thursday to 10.49 per cent from 10.63 a week earlier, continuing a three-month steady but gradual decline in the trend-setting rate.

Chartered banks usually follow the central bank's lead in decreasing charges on loans to their customers, but Stevens and Bob Rae, New Democratic finance critic, both said banks have not cut interest rates as much as they should.

Since the bank rate peaked in April at 16.2 per cent, it has come down 5.71 percentage points. But the prime rate, charged by banks on loans to their biggest and best customers, has come down only 4.24 percentage points to 13.25 per cent.

Consumers pay even more than this — up to 15.75 per cent — for most bank loans.

Stevens said the government realizes the bank rate grabs public attention every Thursday when it is set one-quarter of a percentage point above the average interest paid on 91-day treasury bills auctioned to finance part of the government's operations.

"The government is causing the illusion of a lower interest rate structure than they're actually creating," he said.

Banks would lower their interest rates if they though the government seriously wanted them to, he added.

Rae agreed, and renewed his call for an amendment to the Bank Act to permit the government to order banks to lower their rates if they are substantially higher than the bank rate.

Even without government pressure, all rates charged by banks will drop further this year.

The B.C. Legal Aid Society is using private detectives to make sure clients using the multi-million dollar system are telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth in completing applications for help.

Bryan Ralph of Vancouver, executive director of the society, told the Times Thursday private eyes have been used for some time to carry out random samplings of hundreds of applications in different parts of the province.

They are also used routinely to check out statements made by persons in longer, more expensive cases such as those dealing with drugs, he said.

Ralph said clients are advised at the time they complete applications for aid that their statements may be subject to investigation.

Using detectives provides a third line of checking — after reviews made by the legal aid interviewer and the lawyer to whom the case is subsequently referred — to ensure declarations of assets and income are correct, he said.

Ralph could not say how many cases of abuse had been uncovered but indicated the number was small.

He said it's nowhere near the 25 per cent level claimed by a Vancouver lawyer on Wednesday.

Tony Allen, who derives 80 per cent of his income from legal aid cases, said a quarter of the cases referred to him by the society are not entitled to the service.

He gave examples of a former client whom he met on a tour in Mexico, another client who was discovered mid-way through a nine-day criminal trial to have had a house valued at $80,000, and another client who gave her total assets at $800 and was later found to have a $54,000 house, furniture worth $12,000, jewelry valued at $10,000 and $14,000 in cash.

"These people have no business drawing from the public purse for their legal needs," said Allen.

He'd like to see a user fee similar to the $30 charged legal aid recipients in Manitoba.

Legal Aid's Ralph said Allen's criticisms have some validity but many clients are women whose eligibility might seem questionable because they have substantial assets locked up in a marriage and can't get the money until the dispute is resolved.

He doesn't think a user-pay approach would solve the problems but is awaiting the results of a study into the Manitoba system before he passes final judgment.

"As far as I can see the user fee is more of a deterrent than a fund-raiser," he said.

But he agreed there is need for some kind of contributory scheme to allow clients to share in the legal aid expenses.

Such a scheme was proposed by former attorney-general Garde Gardom three years ago when the government amalgamated the Legal Aid Society and Legal Services Commission.

The proposal was never acted upon although, Ralph said, some clients have made contributions on their own. Last year they totalled $40,000 to $50,000.

In addition, he said, some clients have made payments to lawyers resulting in a reduction in bills to the society which last year totalled $6 million.

Ralph felt there are sufficient safeguards to prevent abuse.

Each client is required to declare all income sources, assets, monthly budget, debt obligations and dependents.

The legal aid interviewer checks out the information.

If the application is approved and the case referred to private practice, the lawyer is asked to review the declaration.

If there is a change in the client's financial circumstances the lawyer is supposed to report it.

Ralph agreed that cases of doubtful elgibility often place the lawyer in a difficult position because many young lawyers rely on the system as their primary source of income.

Ralph said cases of flagrant abuses could result in criminal action.

Under the Offences Act, a person making a false declaration may face a fine up to $2,000 and/or six months in jail.

But to date no one has been prosecuted although two or three cases have been referred to Crown counsel in the past year.

Ralph said the society isn't about to take a heavier stance against abusers of the system because the number of problems so far haven't warranted it.

A-G asks for report

Attorney-General Allan Williams is concerned about allegations that the B.C. legal aid service is being ripped off by people who can afford to pay for a lawyer.

He has asked the B.C. Legal Aid Society, which administers the program, for a report on the claims.

"If they're accurate, I want to know what they propose to do about it," Williams said Thursday.

The allegations come from Vancouver lawyer Tony Allen, whose practice is 80 per cent legal aid work. He said the system's screening process fails to weed out clients who have no business drawing from the public purse for legal advice.

TOWN TALK

It was, says Gordon McDougall of Victoria, an awesome experience to come face-to-face with Mount St. Helens.

He chartered a plane for $100 and flew over the steaming crater.

"I wasn't really afraid but I must admit there was a moment or two of apprehension when we flew over the volcano and I remembered the blast (on May 18) was more powerful than the atomic bomb that fell on Hiroshima."

In the plane besides McDougall and the Seattle pilot was Sally Foote, 21, of Seattle, a friend of McDougall's.

"I didn't do it because of the danger," McDougall says, "I just wanted to see what a live volcano looked like. I'll never forget the experience."

Capt. R. H. (Rip) Kirby has ended a colorful 30-year naval career, has last command being the operational supply ship HMCS Provider.

He was born in Esquimalt on June 12, 1929, graduated from Royal Roads Military College in 1949 and underwent training with the Royal Navy until 1952.

Other ships he has commanded include HMCS Restigouche, Mackenzie, Kootenay and Qu'Appelle.

Although officially retired, Kirby has not given up his love of the sea. When Town Talk tried to contact him this week he was out fishing.

The Times story Thursday about the province's Youth Employment Program could be the tip of a large iceberg.

YEP, until this year a successful work-creation scheme, was scored by employers who didn't get the number of youths they wanted or were advised too late of what they would get. Slow pay also was charged.

Cottage Resort owner Nick Cooke on Salt Spring Island interviewed youths back in March and selected a girl in April. But Cooke says program coordinator Pam Campbell told him not to worry about rushing and to send in his application by mid-June.

He did.

The letter turning Cooke's application down — because there were no funds left — was signed by Campbell. Cooke is convinced he would have had better luck had he applied when he wanted to.

In the Gulf Islands Driftwood, Campbell denies giving Cooke a bum steer. She also said Cooke's was the only Gulf Islands application turned down and that the ministry will shell out $65,899 in matching payments in that area.

McGeer won't help CFRE take over empty CBC building

Communications Minister Pat McGeer has switched off the CFRE Public Broadcasting Society's bid for provincial support to take over the vacant CBC building at King and Blanshard.

"There is no provincial money available for CFRE," McGeer said today.

CFRE treasurer John Elliot said after meeting Thursday with McGeer he felt the government had begun the long move towards support of a public television channel.

However, McGeer indicated otherwise.

"Television is an extremely expensive medium We are not in the business of providing a television network for the public," he said.

There already is a public TV network in the CBC, he added.

His only words of comfort for CFRE: "It's an extremely enthusiastic group. It deserves to be encouraged while they explore this option further."

But the provincial government has no intention of providing more than verbal support and CFRE will have to find its financial support elsewhere, he said.

As for the vacant CBC building, McGeer said he is still interested in acquiring it for his own ministry.

"We may consider making a further effort to come up with an arrangement for that building which would permit it to be used for public purposes," McGeer said.

An earlier attempt to purchase the building fell through because the provincial government would not meet the federal government's asking price.

McGeer said the province now may attempt to lease part or all of the building.

He said he would like to see it used by communications ministry staff, now housed in temporary quarters, and as headquarters for the government's new Knowledge Network.

"We might be able to make a deal. However, at this stage it's still speculation," McGeer said.

The minister met Thursday with CFRE representatives to hear their proposal for a public television station in Victoria to be broadcast on Channel 10, which was left vacant when CBC pulled out of its commitment to a Victoria operation.

New attempt set on fire contract

Esquimalt council has decided to try and contract out its firefighting protection to Victoria.

Council made the move after a joint meeting with the police board.

Council's decision — which came after the Esquimalt Police Board again turned down a proposal to upgrade the municipality's combined fire and police force — means it has gone back to its original plan to contract out firefighting services.

Although the original motion to join Victoria made earlier this year was given unanimous support by council, the latest motion had two dissenters.

Council can't upgrade the existing combined department without the board's okay but it can remove the responsiblity for fire protection from the department, said Ald. Larry Mann.

A committee of council which had been negotiating with Victoria about details of transferring Esquimalt's fire service stopped talks when council came under pressure. It abandoned the idea of joining with Victoria and decided to recommend an upgraded combined local department.

In earlier negotiations Victoria has agreed to offer positions to all the designated firemen on Esquimalt's force, said Mann.

One of the main points still to be settled is what will happen to any surplus policemen who will not be needed if the firefighting responsiblity is taken away from the Esquimalt department.

Mann said council doesn't want any personnel to lose jobs because of the transfer and he's hopeful an agreement can be reached with Victoria.

Mann, who supported transferring firefighting to Victoria's department since it was proposed earlier this year, said the transfer will result in the best service for the community.

"We'll have a first-class service immediately if we go with Victoria. If we developed our own force it would be a number of years before we could achieve an equivalent status."

Even then the department wouldn't have the benefits of a larger department such as fire prevention, inspection and training programs.

Cost of having Victoria handle fire calls in Esquimalt will probably be based on a per-capita charge, said the alderman. Armed forces areas in Esquimalt will be excluded from the population estimate because they have their own fire service.

Jan. 1 was discussed as the target date for changeover of service from Esquimalt to Victoria when it was discussed earlier.

Union spokesmen could not be reached for comment about council's most recent decision although the union has said the existing police and fire department service must be improved in some way.

Youth soccer hits high with visit of Austrians

A match that could well prove to be the year's most exciting soccer conflict seen on Royal Athletic Park is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 24.

That evening, a highly-touted youth team from Innsbruck, Austria, will play the Lower Island Under-16 Selects.

"This Austrian team beat a professional club's youth squad from Barcelona in the final of a recent French youth tournament and got rave reviews in the press," says Lower Island Select team coach Mike de Turberville.

But Mike, who with assistant coach Bert Storer and manager Ed Kozicki have been handling the Selects since just before Christmas, has a bit of raving to do about his own boys.

"They are playing good soccer and this should be a great match," he says, adding that the junior game here has improved incredibly in the last couple of years.

"The kids have something to identify with now in the North American Soccer League," he explains. "It's not all hockey and baseball now. A young soccer player growing up here is now very much like the kids in England with idols and visible examples of how the game should be played.

The game with the visiting Austrian squad and a warm-up one against a University of Victoria team at Royal Athletic Park on Monday, July 21, will serve as fund raisers for a three-week tour of the United Kingdom Aug. 12 to Sept. 2, 1981.

Mike, Ed and Bert will take 15 boys on the tour and already matches are being arranged in Ayreshire, Manchester, Swansea, Bristol, Plymouth and London.

"Hopefully, we will be able to play the youth teams of pro clubs in places like Manchester and Swansea and thus not only give our boys a chance to meet the toughest opposition but to enable them to be seen by some pro coaches and scouts," Mike points out.

The tour will break new ground as the first to be made by a select side from anywhere in B.C.

"Clubs have been on tour before but not representative teams," explains Ed. "And we're hoping it will encourage other bodies to do the same sort of thing and give boys something extra to shoot for."

Right now, though, the "something extra" the Lower Island Selects have to shoot for is cash. The tour — for the 15 boys and three officials — will coast around $20,000 and between now and August, 1981, the squad will be involved in a regular series of fund-raising efforts such as car washes, kick-a-thons, dances and bottle drives.

The 15 who will be going are Lou Macedo, Paddy Wyman, Chris Smith and Alan McDirmid (all Gorge), Bruce Cafferky and Scott Longpre (Gordon Head), Robin Baird, Brian Mousley, Jeff Mallett, John Hughes and Peter Gubbles (Bays United), Gerald Yung (Cordova Bay), Adam Keith (Lansdowne Evening Optimists), David Houston (Lakehill) and Dale Fagenello (Cowichan).

Mallett, Keith and Longpre are among 20 boys on the B.C. Under-16 Selects. That squad will be cut to 16 at the end of the summer for the Under-16 national tournament, involving teams from every province, in Toronto.

"It shows just how well our boys have been playing this season when 10 out of 15 were invited over to Vancouver to try out for the B.C. team," says a proud coach. "Never before has the Lower Island had more than two or three try out!"

Stricken boxer passed all tests

HALIFAX (CP) — Cleveland Denny, the 24-year-old boxer who has been on life support systems since he was injured in a lightweight fight June 20, had all the necessary medical tests and was in good health before the bout, Canada's top boxing official said Thursday.

Murray Sleep, president of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation, said in an interview Denny had heart and brain tests June 11. The tests were checked by doctors from the Montreal Athletic Commission and the hospital where they were performed.

Sleep said Denny was given every medical precaution available, but admitted the fight could have been stopped before Denny was knocked out by Canadian lightweight champion Gaetan Hart in the 10th round of their non-title bout in Montreal.

"Personally I thought it could have been stopped," Sleep said. "It was obvious he was in trouble."

"The last couple of blows did it. Three doctors couldn't get his mouth piece out while he was paralysed in the corner. To see two men in that shape in six weeks is sad."

The second man Sleep was referring to was Ralph Racine, of Niagara Falls, Ont., who was knocked out by Hart during a fight May 7. Racine was rushed to hospital for brain surgery. He was in a coma for several days and is recovering in a Hamilton, Ont., nursing home.

Members of the federation executive attending the fight generally agreed the referee did a good job, although one said the fight might have been stopped before Denny was knocked out with 12 seconds remaining in the final round, Sleep said.

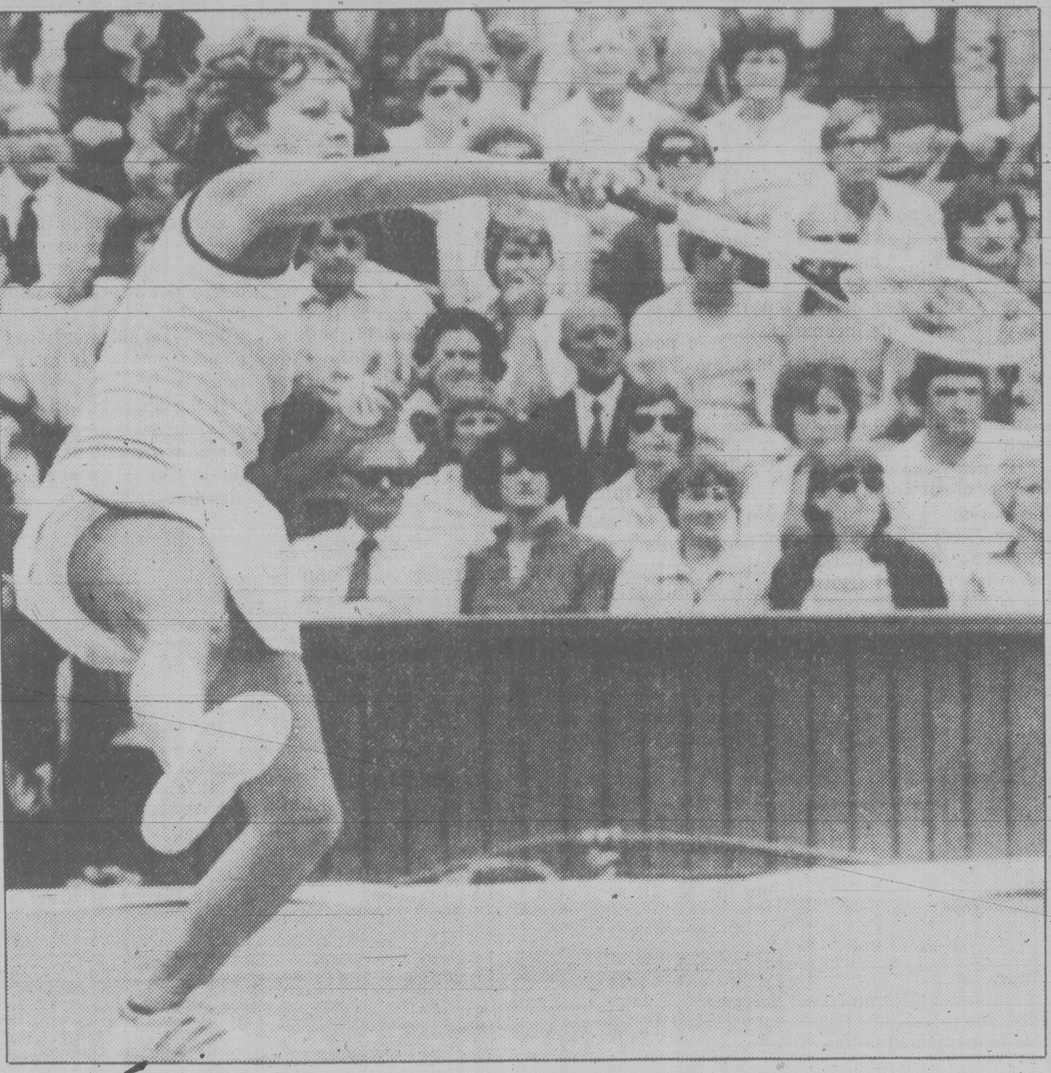
Pick Six winner hits jackpot of $244,397

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Loma Malad, a 29-1 shot ridden by Sandy Hawley of Mississauga, Ont., won the $45,850 feature race for two-year-olds at Hollywood Park on Wednesday, but a bartender won a bigger pot.

Pete Karavidas, 51, who said he hasn't missed a day at the track in 14 years, was the only bettor to pick all six winners in races two through seven won $244,397 in the Holly Sweeps Pick Six wagering.

Karavidas said part of the money would go for a cataract operation for his mother, who is blind. He said he wagered a total of $192 on a number of combinations — after he had a dream including three of the winning numbers.

McEnroe topples Connors



Evonne Goolagong Cawley in action against Chris Evert at Wimbledon today

Gains Wimbledon final against Borg

LONDON (AP) — John McEnroe stormed to a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Jimmy Connors today and advanced to the finals of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

McEnroe, the second seed, will meet four-time defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden in Saturday's final.

(Evonne Goolagong won the first set from Chris Evert Lloyd 6-1 in the women's final and was leading 1-0 in the second set when rain interrupted play.)

In making the Wimbledon finals for the first time, second-seeded McEnroe used a strong serve and precise volleying to stop Connors, seeded third and the Wimbledon winner in 1974.

The semifinal was a duel of sustained aggression by both players and lasted more than three hours. McEnroe slammed 12 aces past Connors, who responded with one. But Connors' returns kept the match close.

Connors had his chances to even the match in the fourth set, grabbing a 2-0 lead by breaking McEnroe in the second game. But the U.S. Open champion broke right back.

Once more, Connors got a service break for a 4-2 lead but McEnroe broke Connors' service the next two times and held his own serve twice to run out the match.

Thursday, Borg earned his place in the final, and a shot at his fifth straight title, with a 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-0 win over unseeded Brian Gottfried of the United States.

"Playing Bjorn Borg is like taking too many body punches," Gottfried said. "You have to work so hard against him, so many balls come back."

Chris Evert Lloyd scored the big upset of the day, ousting Martina Navratilova, the two-time defender from Czechoslovakia, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, to earn a finals berth today with Australian Evonne Goolagong.

At one set apiece, Gottfried looked cool and comfortable.

"He got better and I got worse," was the way the American summed up his slump. "That's the way a good player does it; he waits for an opportunity and takes it."

Borg was happy with his performance.

"I am feeling confident. That is the main thing. I'm happy I have a day off Friday while Jimmy plays McEnroe. I hope that they will be out there for several hours.

"I still want to win as much as ever, especially now I'm in the final again. You might enjoy it more the first time you reach the final, but it still means the same."

Connors clinched his semifinal place by winning a 2¾-hour duel with big-serving Roscoe Tanner of the U.S., the No. 5 seed and last year's beaten finalist.

Connors won, 1-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Although his attitude off court has mellowed, Connors said he still maintains his desire to win.

"My attitude on court is exactly the same as it was 10, four or two years ago," he said. "My attitude off court and the way I relax may be a lot different, but I still want to win."

Evert Lloyd is unbeaten since April. The American has won the French and Italian opens and the Chichester tournament.

A win would have moved Shamrocks into a tie for the lead with Coquitlam Adanacs.

Victoria led 3-1 at the end of the first period and the clubs split eight goals in the final frame.

Len Ciminelli scored three goals to lead New Westminster while Dave Durante and Mark Tuura scored twice each. Brian Tasker, Gilles Bezeau, Eric Cowieson and Ray Durante also scored.

Cowichan estuary report missing same basic facts

Here we go again!

There are some obvious lessons to be learned from experiences south of the border. They've made some mistakes in the past that we don't have to repeat.

But, lemming-like, we tend to ignore basic parallels and insist on suffering the same blows ourselves.

Case in point: the Cowichan River estuary.

It is now about two years since the Estuary Task Force Report was scheduled to be handed in and still no sign of it — although rumors insist the long-awaited missive is due in the not-too-distant future.

However, don't hold your breath. I've heard it all before.

It should come as no surprise, too, that some leaked sections indicate the report will come down more on the side of the timber industry than the fisheries resource.

A meeting on the subject last Saturday in Duncan attracted aver 100 people — a fair turnout considering it was the start of a long weekend.

Wolf Bauer of Seattle, an engineering expert on estuaries who has served as a consultant to the Task Force as well as both senior levels of government and numerous timber companies, had a few interesting things to say concerning the problem.

He stressed, however, that he hadn't studied the Cowichan estuary in detail but could make some general observations from the work he had done on the area as part of a general eastern coastline study of Vancouver Island he did for the provincial government.

To his knowledge, the Task Force hasn't completed a basic study to divide the estuary into natural system zones — something that should be the foundation of any decisions regarding use of the estuary.

"You can't divide an estuary geographically," he explained, adding that the natural zones must be identified. He then drew an interesting parallel between estuaries and the body, another integrated system.

By applying surgical techniques it is possible to remove one lung without killing the patient. But, he explained, it wasn't possible to cut out half of each of the lungs.

About two years ago, Bauer advised the Task Force to set up land use plans on the basis of natural systems after they invited him to speak to one of their meetings.

There are indications the group has put some rather arbitrary zones into the report — but not the type Bauer recommended.

"That is not the type of zoning I talked about to the Task Force . . . but they can be used to modify the natural zones," he explained.

And, by modifying the natural zones, the value of the estuary for fisheries and recreation is decreased.

"If any management decision has been made, it hasn't been made with full knowledge," said Baeur.

Oregon and Washington states already have laws on the books or pending to protect the very fragile estuary resources.

Boiled down to the essentials, the problem is very simple.

There is absolutely no way to duplicate the habitat for fisheries and wildlife supplied by the delicate ecosystems found within the boundaries of estuaries.

Ergo, since industry has alternate sites available (although a few tradeoffs might have to be considered for shipping and receiving purposes), it should be restricted or moved completely and the area rehabilitated.

There are some ways in which industry and estuaries can co-exist. Bauer showed some slides of one estuary where industry was located along one side of the river while the estuary's ecosystem remained virtually intact on the other shore.

But in the Cowichan estuary, such harmony is virtually impossible because of the scattered locations of the industrial sites.

As Bauer pointed out in his lecture:

"What economic sense is it to bury one resource for another?"

Perhaps the provincial government, in its infinite wisdom, has found the answer.

But I don't really think so.

NIBBLES: Mike Kobierski dropped by the other day with the latest creation to spring from his local lure-manufacturing business.

"Mike's Double Action", a drift-fishing lure made from a lead-based alloy, is available in two sizes. Various reports have indicated it's doing quite well in the Sidney area, especially off the James Island powder wharf.

An added feature, which should be a hit among some of the highly individualistic highliners hereabouts, it that it can be bent to customize your own action.

Some excellent catches of coho are starting to show off the Sooke-Pedder Bay waterfront. Fish along the tide lines with driftfishing gear, strip or light green hootchies at the 30-foot depth.

Some catches of chinooks to the 30s are also showing.

Red-hot coho action has been reported around the Campbell River, Courtenay and Nanaimo areas.

Alberta comes through with arena for Flames

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government bailed out the National Hockey League's Calgary Flames and Calgary's Winter Olympics bid Thursday, agreeing to pay one-third of the cost of an 18,000-seat coliseum in the city.

Premier Peter Lougheed said the provincial government would also guarantee another one-third, which the federal government will be asked to assume.

"In order that the project may proceed without delay the province will guarantee a loan for the final one-third of the cost until a response is received from the federal government," Lougheed told a news conference.

Design of the arena will be based on the smaller 15,294-seat Northlands Coliseum in Edmonton.

The premier said a six-member board of directors will be appointed to oversee construction of the structure, part of Calgary's bid for the 1988 Winter Olympics.

The coliseum will also house the Flames, moved to Calgary this spring after Vancouver millionaire Nelson Skalbania purchased the NHL's Atlanta Flames. Until the new building is finished the Flames will play in the 6,500-seat Calgary Corral.

Skalbania said he would like to see the coliseum modelled after structures in Birmingham or Atlanta.

Crack field for Invitational

Seven entries — including four from the best standardbreds in Western Canada — have been received for the biggest race in the history of harness racing at Sandown Raceway and a shot at the first sub two-minute mile in B.C.

Saturday's invitational is a one-mile pace for $5,000.

But the weather might have a bearing on which ones run.

Highly-rated Michaels Glory, which set a lifetime best of 1:59.2 at Edmonton in May, is a doubtful starter if it continues to rain.

"Rick Graham (driver-trainer) says he won't take a chance if the track is wet," said Sandown general-manager Jim Keeling Sr., "so we're hoping for good weather."

The other members of the top quartet scheduled to make their first starts of the year here are Over Burden, Billy Barker and Baron Nuff. Previous invitational winners Andys Peyton, Amortizers Beauty and Loulabelle Choice round out the field.

Magna Almahurst, another speed horse from Edmonton, won't be running Saturday but should make its first appearance in the second $5,000 stakes race July 12.

Lucky Strike Stables of Edmonton and contractors Wakeman and Trimble of Victoria are co-sponsoring the feature race and two preferred races for $2,000 purses will serve as preliminaries.

They include Delta Duke, Maple Hills Smokey, Irish Dawn, Shirley Mowhak and Call 'N Raise, in one heat and Recount Time, Irish Flame, Flash Fire, Winsome Adios and Sweet Angie in the other.

A sloppy track Thursday held times down but 1,263 patrons turned out and were rewarded with three triple-figure Exactor payoffs.

Grant Hollingsworth played a major role in all three rewards.

He drove longshots Charms All and Dolls Duke to victory in the third and fourth races, respectively, and placed with Tiger Adios in the seventh.

Charms All and Loki set up a $432.70 return while Dolls Duke and Dustys Esther paid off $485.70 — among the top payouts during the first 27 days of the 65-day meet.

Governors Star Boy won the seventh and combined with Tiger Adios for a $166.90 shellout.

A mutuel handle of $111,549 was a little under the $119,000-plus average for the meet but it was the 15th straight day that fans have wagered over $100,000.

Track officials announced that from now on, triactor tickets on the 10th race will go on sale after the seventh race.

Racing continues today with a parade to the post at 5:20 and the Saturday event begins at 1:20.

Thursday's results and Saturday's entries are on page 27.

Smythe choice in city tennis

Fresh from an unusually easy victory over Racquet Club of Victoria pro Russ Hartley, Peter Smythe goes into the first round of the City Open Tennis Championships tonight as top seed and hot favorite to take the men's singles title.

Smythe cruised past Hartley, normally a much closer rival, 6-1, 6-2 Sunday in the final of the Nanaimo City Open, although the eventual winner was given a tough time of it in the semi-finals where he had to rally for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 win over hard-hitting Nanaimo player Steve Yesowick.

Hartley, who got past Dale Willard of Victoria 6-4, 6-2 in the semi-finals in Nanaimo, is seeded second in the Victoria City event.

Enid Jackson is top seed in the women's singles here followed by Sandra Moss, who defeated Elvira Kapus 6-3, 6-0 to win the women's event in Nanaimo.

Also in Nanaimo, Victoria's Scott Braley and Trevor Smythe beat Hartley and Marty Taylor 7-6, 6-4 to take the men's doubles title, the women's doubles crown went to Sandra Moss and Andrea Wiles and the mixed doubles winners were Kim Blank and Tara Ney.

First-round matches in the Victoria City Open, hosted by the Oak Bay Tennis Club, start at 5:30 tonight and run all next week with the championship finals set to start at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 12.

AIA team plays here

Athletes in Action, a Colorado Springs club coached by former Baltimore Oriole Gerry Brandenburg that won the Pacific Coast invitational baseball tournament last weekend in Vancouver, will play an exhibition doubleheader Saturday at Lambrick Park.

Farmer Construction of the Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior League will supply the opposition.

Action gets underway at 12 noon.

Ice Federation can't decide

STENUNGSUND, Sweden (Reuter) — The International Ice Hockey Federation was unable to decide at its annual congress whether to let Canada hold a Canada Cup tournament next year.

IIHF officials will meet North American National Hockey League President John Ziegler in Baden-Baden, West Germany, on July 14 to take a final decision on the matter.

Summer track program set for Wednesdays

Track and field athletes in the Greater Victoria area can get a little extra practice this month.

Starting next Wednesday, a series of four meets has been scheduled at Centennial Stadium.

The meets, which start with 7 p.m. registrations, are scheduled July 9, 16, 23 and 30. Each meet will consist of a short sprint, a long sprint, a hurdles event, middle or long distance race and a field event.

Competitors can pay either $1.50 for the series or 50¢ per meet and participate in as many events as they want and will be graded by the organizers as to ability — novice, recreational, intermediate or expert.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning Ron Bowker at 477-6911, local 4790.

Court rink wins

Skip Gladys Court, Bernice Bett, Kitty McLeod and Katherine Strouts captured the Ina White Trophy for women's rinks at the Oak Bay Lawn Bowling Club.

Singles results due Monday

Although unsettled weather and competitors' conflicting holiday times have held things up somewhat, finally the first round has been completed in mixed doubles play in the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament.

Cards have gone out already for the mixed doubles second-round matches, which must be completed by July 17.

The deadline is much sooner, though, for the men's singles event where the massive starting field of 131 players has been cut to 64. Second-round results in that event must be in by 5 p.m. next Monday, July 7, and that will reduce the number left in to 32.

They're already down to 32 in both the women's and junior boys' singles events and the second-round results in those two must be in by next Friday, July 11.

The tourney, designed for public parks players, runs through July and August and ends with the semi-finals and finals of all five events on Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts on Aug. 23 and 24.

DIVING STAB by New York Mets third baseman Alex Trevino proved futile Thursday night at New York's Shea Stadium. Line drive by Montreal Expos' catcher Gary Carter went for double during National League baseball game but New York managed to come out with 7-2 victory. (AP Wirephoto).

New York surge rolls over Expos

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Joe Torre was happily considering New York Mets' recent surge of nine victories in 12 National League baseball games.

"I like the way our guys are going about this — one game at a time," said Torre after his team beat Montreal Expos 7-2 Thursday night. "We are now two under .500, but I don't know if that's important.

"We are in the pennant race, and I remember that one Mets team in 1973 won the pennant when they were almost under .500."

That team finished with a won-loss record of 83-79 and beat Cincinnati Reds in the playoffs.

The 1980 Mets, using a three-run homer from the bat of Lee Mazzilli, beat Montreal, reducing the Expos lead to five games over the fourth-place Mets.

Dick Williams, the Expos manager, who managed Oakland A's when they beat the Mets in the 1973 World Series, said: "The Mets have impressed me. They are battling. I have to say they have surprised the whole league. They are playing hard and they are not a pushover by any means, but neither are we.

"I think this is going to be a good race," continued Williams, "I think it will go all the way down to the end just like last year, with more teams involved, including possibly the Mets."

Montreal, which now now lost five of seven, got ahead of New York starter Ray Burris in the second inning.

Gary Carter opened the inning with a double, went to third on Warren Cromartie's single and scored on a long fly by Larry Parrish.

But in the bottom of the second the Mets broke it open with a five-run rally, helped by an Expos error.

Charlie Lea, 2-3, walked Mike Jorgensen with one out. Steve Henderson bounced to short and Chris Speier booted the ball, putting runners on first and second.

Singles by Alex Trevino and Doug Flynn brought in the first two runs of the inning before Burris split his thumb trying to bunt and was forced to withdraw. Precautionary x-rays were be taken today.

After pinch-hitter Ron Hodges bounced out, Mazzilli slammed a 3-2 pitch from Lea over the right field wall for a three-run homer to make the score 5-1. Lea had shaken off Carter, his catcher, twice.

"I was looking for a slider," admitted Mazzilli, who has been hot with a 23-for-54 splurge and four homers in seven games. "But he threw a fastball up and I hit it real good."

Montreal picked up an unearned run off Tom Hausman, 4-2, who replaced Burris.

"Any kind of slump is disappointing," said Carter. "But we have to bounce back from it.

"I think it's just a temporary thing. We have too much talent here for this to go on much longer. We have two opportunities tomorrow to snap out of it."

Tampering charged

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers of the National Hockey League are considering tampering charges against Los Angeles Kings for signing Ralph Backstrom as an assistant coach.

Glen Sather, Oiler general manager and coach, told a news conference that Backstrom had verbally agreed to accept a similar position with the Oilers.

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Yugoslavia has announced a 160-member team to compete in 17 sports at the Moscow Olympics.

Barnard is thorn in side of Capitals

Dave Barnard reached base four times and scored twice Thursday night to help Mears Realty nip Capital Builders 4-3 in a Heywood Avenue Men's League softball game at Heywood Park.

Barnard singled his first three times at bat and got the winning run after being hit by a pitch in the seventh inning. He advanced on a single by Dave Green and scored on an error.

Bill Cool smacked a two-run homer for the Builders in the seventh inning.

In Victoria-Saanich Women's League play Thursday night, Nancy McLauchlin pitched a four-hitter, striking out six batters and walking only one as New York, New York shut out Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart 2-0 at Hyacinth Park.

Lynn Hatch scored the winning run as Victoria Athletics shaded McDonald Furniture 4-3 in the other game.

And in Macdonald Park Men's League games, Ed McNabb hurled a no-hitter as the Saints beat Mega-Power 11-0 and Mayfair Insurance crushed Coast Projects 11-2.

Gordon signed as Milford aide

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks beefed up their front office staff Thursday with the appointment of Jackie Gordon as assistant general manager of the National Hockey League team.

The 52-year-old native of Winnipeg joins the Canucks after 10 seasons with Minnesota, including five years as coach of the North Stars.

General manager Jake Milford of the Canucks said Gordon would help him in the area of player negotiations with agents, the operation of the team's Dallas farm club in the Central Hockey League and the scouting staff.

Milford, who will be 64 later this month, said Gordon wasn't brought to Vancouver to be the next general manager, a position it is believed will be offered to coach Harry Neale when Milford eventually moves on to the club presidency.

Gordon was named coach of the North Stars in 1970 and Minnesota had a 116-124-50 record under his guidance from behind the bench. Gordon was appointed coach and general manager in 1974 and a year later elected to handle only the front office duties.

He remained general manager of the North Stars until February, 1978, when former Minnesota player Lou Nanne took over the position. Gordon had been a special assignment scout since then.

"I think I'll be the biggest help to the team in the area of signing draft choices," Gordon said.

Beacon Hill gains Little League final

Ben Peleshaty snapped a 3-3 tie with a three-run homer in the sixth inning Thursday night to lift Mayfair Glass of Beacon Hill to a 6-3 win over Brentwood Supermarket of Central Saanich and a berth in the Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship final.

Mike Hayes, the losing pitcher, had stolen home in the fifth inning to create the tie but then Peleshaty smacked his game-winning homer.

In the other semi-final, Lakehill plays host Triangle at 6:30 tonight and the winner of that one meets Beacon Hill in the tourney final at Juan de Fuca Park in Colwood, Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

In the Girls' Little League major championships, which opened Thursday night at Lakehill Park, Gordon Head trounced Layritz 24-1. Gordon Head now takes on Lakehill tonight at 6:30.

All bows pointing to Sidney Regatta

The third annual Sidney Regatta takes place this weekend and the organizers are hoping it will attract a record entry. This is an invitational event for both keel boats and dinghy sailors.

You can register until 9 this evening at the Sea Chest Sailing Shop, 9732 First Street, in Sidney. If you don't make tonight's, deadline skippers can register before 9 a.m. on Saturday.

Keel boat registration will be at the government dock at the foot of Beacon Avenue with a skippers' meeting set for 9:30 a.m.

Dinghy racing will be out of Tulista Park with a skippers' meeting set for the same time.

Keel boats will have a three-race series. Saturday's races will start at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

A maximum of six races has been scheduled for dinghy enthusiasts and it is hoped to have class racing for Hobie Cats, Fireballs, Sabots, Lasers and X-class.

The Hobie Cat fleet, well-known for the energy members put behind anything they do, are organizing a steak barbecue Saturday evening in Tulista Park.

Registration is $10 for a one-person dinghy and includes a barbecue meal. Keel boat skippers will be charged $15 and given two tickets to the meal. Extra tickets will be available.

Two Royal Victoria Yacht Club skippers are in Vancouver today to make their bids on two other racing circuits.

One of them is Vidas Stukas, whose Jan finished fourth in the just-completed Duke of Edinburgh Dragon championships, staged by the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club. Considering Jan is 20 years older than any of the other Dragons in the six-race series, that's quite a feat for Vidas and his crew, David Paton and John Lewis.

The new champion is Robbie Wilcox' Elan of the Seattle Yacht Club. Runners-up were Bruce van Nus' Tatsu of the Royal Van and Frank Francisco's Jumala of Seattle's Corinthian Yacht Club.

Now Vidas and his crew are competing in the North American Dragon championships that are taking place in Vancouver this weekend. He's hoping to get Jan moving again and do even better this time.

Peter Dennis and the crew of Moon Dance are competing in the first annual Texada and Lasqueti Islands Race which gets under way in Vancouver today. Peter is entered in the 132-mile race around the two islands and back. There's also a shorter 98-mile race around Lasqueti Island only.

Like most sailors, I have a healthy respect for the Canadian Power Squadrons on Vancouver Island who do such a great job of education for those who make the water their milieu. When I have a chance to pass on a tip from them I do.

This week I have two. The first comes from the Brentwood Bay squadron and concerns the mounting number of logs and debris that we see in these waters.

The Debris Committee of the Council of B.C. Yacht Clubs is trying to do something about it and the Brentwood Bay group suggests we all get behind the committee by reporting any recent damage done by logs to your boat's hull or machinery, with a photograph if possible.

This can be done by writing the secretary D.F. Stirling at 101-11491 7th Avenue, Richmond, V7E 4J5.

The council, which represents some 9,200 boaters fom 34 yacht clubs in B.C., will present the evidence to the ministry of forestry and environment.

Gordon Veitch of the Powell River squadron comes up with a suggestion which could add to the pleasures of cruising — take along some appropriate books with which to relax in a quiet cove on a summer evening, particularly on the history of places you may visit.

His book list includes Capt. Walbran's B.C. Coast Names, which covers the years 1592-1906; John and Carolyn West's Cruising The Inside Passage; Will Dawson's Coastal Cruising, and Bern Anderson's Voyages of Captain Vancouver.

Wilf and Kits Harper have arranged a sortie in the Witty Beach area on Sunday for members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club. Travelling via Langford and Metchosin along William Head Road past the community hall, members should turn left onto Taylor Road to Taylor Beach, meeting at 10 a.m.

Members will paddle along the beach for a few miles toward town and Witty Beach, making their way up the creek to see the interesting waterfall that's in the park.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Penny has hopes of flippin' change

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Penny Pulz, who hopes to turn around what she says has been a rotten year so far, shot a four-under-par 68 Thursday to take a one stroke lead over four other golfers after the first round of the $150,000 Mayflower Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Pulz, who has one victory to show for seven seasons on the tour, carted a 34-34 on the 6,044-yard, par 72 Harbor Trees Golf Club.

Kathy Young, Bonnie Bryant, Kathy Ahern and Amy Alcott were tied for second at 69.

"It's been a miserable year, I've had a rotten year," said Pulz, 27, an Australian citizen who plays out of Cleveland, Ohio. "My swing has been susceptible all year.

"I haven't been working with good thoughts. In the last few weeks, it's (her game) getting so much closer all the time."

Pulz, who has finished in the top 10 only once this year, had four birdies and no bogeys. She made putts of eight and 15 feet for birdies on the front nine, and then made back-nine birdie putts of 15 and 20 feet.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., shot 75 in the opening round.

After 36, Sandy is Harper dandy

CASTLEGAR — Nanaimo's Sandy Harper, a 23-year-old commerce student at Simon Fraser University, fought gusty winds Thursday to grab a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the 72-hole B.C. Amateur golf championship.

Harper shot a 70 for a 36-hole total of 137, an impressive seven under par.

First-round leader Gary Puder of Vancouver ballooned to a 79 Thursday to fall eight strokes off the pace.

Jeff Fought of Portland moved into second with a 36-hole total of 140 while pre-tournament favorite Dick Zokol of Vancouver was third with a one-under-par 143. Danny Walker of the host Castlegar club had an even-par 144.

From a Vancouver Island standpoint, it was a Harper family show.

Sandy's younger brothers Ian and Jamie were at 145 and 148, resp)ectively, while a fourth, Bruce, survived the 36-hole cut with a 151 total.

Glen Meadows' Don Gowan, theVictoria City champion, fired his second successive 74 to top Victoria hopefuls.

The field of 159 golfers was cut to 80 and ties for today's third round. Golfers shooting 160 or better survived the cut.

The tournament ends Saturday.

Brown greens satisfy leaders

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The greens were supposed to be on everyone's mind.

"I don't care what they said — I found them delightful," said Hale Irwin, one of three men sharing the lead at 69 after first-round play Thursday in the Western Open golf tournament.

"The longer I went out there, the more confident I got on the speed of the greens," said Larry Ziegler, who also shot 69 and was getting more confident as he cruised the back nine at Butler National golf course with five consecutive birdies and a record 31.

"I managed to shake a few (putts) in," said Tom Kite, the third man at 69. "I missed a few, too."

A disease rendered many of the greens on the 7,097-yard, par-72 layout more brown in some patches than green. But club officials kept them watered and soft to hold approach shots, and removed some of the treachery on short putts by spilling sand around the cups.

And the players, chasing a $54,000 first prize, coped.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C., the lone Canadian entered, had an opening-round 73.

"I found that 40 to 50 bumps to the hole sort of evened out — not like two or three bumps," said Irwin, the 1979 U.S. Open and 1975 Western champion who dropped putts of from six to 15 feet for six birdies in his round.

"You just can't dwell on the greens or you'll be beating a dead horse. You can't change them."

Ziegler, a non-winner since 1976, rolled in birdie putts from three to 15 feet in blistering the last nine.

You have the following hand, both sides vulnerable.

♠ KQ1083 ♡ KQ95 ◇ K4 ♣ A2

1. Partner bids One Diamond and you respond Two Spades. Partner bids Three Diamonds and you bid Three Hearts. Partner says Four Diamonds. What would you bid now?

2. Your right-hand opponent bids One Diamond, which you double. Your partner responds One Heart. What would you bid now?

3. After two passes, your right-hand opponent bids One Club, which you double. Your partner responds Two Hearts. What would you bid now?

4. You open One Spade and partner bids Two Notrump. You bid Three Hearts and partner bids Three Notrump. What would you bid now?

1. Four Notrump. Partner obviously has a one-track mind — he likes diaonds. He probably has seven diamonds headed by the A-Q or A-Q-J, and how many tricks your side can make seems to depend mostly on how many aces he has.

It is therefore best to bid four notrump. In this sequence, four notrump is Blackwood even though no suit has been directly agreed upon as trump. If partner shows three aces by responding five spades, you bid seven notrump (or seven diamonds). If he shows two aces by responding five hearts, you bid six diamonds. If he shows one ace by bidding five diamonds, you pass.

2. Three Hearts. You lack the values to bid four hearts — partner may have a dreadful hand — but your hand is too strong for a raise to only two hearts. Three hearts is just about right.

3. Three Clubs. When this hand appeared in the Bridge World magazine, a panel of 45 experts voted as follows: 22 for three clubs; 16 for four hearts; 5 for four notrump; 2 for two spades.

Those favoring three clubs (a cuebid) or four notrump were obviously more slam-minded than those who leaped to four hearts, basically a closing bid. It does seems that if partner has two aces a slam is probable, and for that reason this writer favored three clubs or four notrump, in that order.

4. Four Nortump. Twelve tricks may be there for the taking if partner has the right values, even though the combined point count cannot be 33. (Two Notrump showed 13 to 15 points.)

Four notrump is invitational in this sequence and partner does not have to respond. It is a raise in notrump and has nothing to do with Blackwood.

Clem had been sitting there quite a while, staring at his new watch. "Something wrong?" Mary asked. "It's under guarantee."

"No, it's fine. I was figuring out something," her husband replied. "Seven minutes ago the hour hand was one minute ahead of where the minute hand is now, and that's right on a minute mark."

What was the time?

Boycott supporter slain by gunmen

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — An international amateur basketball official who supported President Carter's boycott of the Moscow Games was shot and killed Thursday in Puerto Rico, police said.

Authorities said Rafael Lopez, vice-president of the International Amateur Basketball Federation, was shot in the chest by two gunmen in a San Juan supermarket two days after Lopez purchased the store.

A second man, identified as Agapito Morales Alicea, 57, a customer, also was shot and killed by the two men, who escaped without any of the store's receipts, police said.

The shooting came just days before Lopez was preparing to travel to Moscow, where he planned to argue against a proposal to reduce the Western Hemisphere's representation in Olympic basketball from three to two.

Francisco Velazquez, a reporter for the Spanish-language newspaper, El Nuevo Dia, picked Lopez up, put him in his car and took him to the nearby San Carlos Hospital, where Lopez died.

Lopez also served as president of Puerto Rico's basketball federation from 1971-1974.

3-Mile plant danger rises, says report

HARRISBURG, Pa (AP) — A new federal report says the Three Mile Island nuclear plant is getting more dangerous by the hour, but the plant's owners say that's partly because of too much federal interference.

"The longer it takes to remove the radioactivity from inside the plant, the more likely it is that further accidental releases of radioactivity will occur," said the report, released Wednesday by the U.S. Senate's environment and public works subcommittee.

The study concluded that the chance of radiation releases — or even a reheating of the reactor core — is increasing because of cleanup complications.

The committee, monitoring the Three Mile Island cleanup, said the accident should not be considered over. "The likelihood of further accidents increases with time," the report said.

"At present, the plant's condition is not fully known," it said. "Further deterioration can be assumed. Damaged and unmaintained equipment may fail and there is the potential for human error."

Ken McKee of General Public Utilities, parent company of plant operator Metropolitan Edison, said some of the delay in the cleanup is inevitable because the operation is "unprecedented in scope and application of state-of-the-art cleanup technology."

But he said vague guidelines and step-by-step Nuclear Regulatory Commission approval procedures also contributed to the problem.

"We need some firm guidelines under which we can operate," he said.

The first step in decontaminating the reactor containment building, the release of 57,000 curies of radioactive krypton gas, has been under way since the weekend.

Plant spokesman Sandy Polon said 21 per cent of the krypton trapped in the containment building since the accident 15 months ago had been released into the atmosphere by Wednesday evening.

Gas pipe firms push for okay

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. consortium planning to build and operate the vital Alaskan section of the joint Canada-U.S. northern natural gas pipeline filed two applications this week for final U.S. authority to get on with the project.

The Alaskan Northwest Natural Gas Transportation Co., which includes seven companies, asked the federal Energy Regulatory Commission for a final and unconditional certificate of public convenience and necessity authorizing construction of the Alaskan line.

Eventually, the 1,180-milometre Alaskan segment of the line is to connect with lines running through Canada to carry Alaskan North Slope gas a total distance of 6,700 kilometres to the lower 48 states.

The application for final authority is one of the final steps in a process started with U.S. regulatory authorities in December, 1977, when a conditional certificate for the project was issued. A final financing plan for the line is to be filed at some future date.

On June 19 the U.S. pipleine sponsors and oil companies that own the Alaskan gas announced tentative approval for sharing design and engineering costs on the difficult Alaskan section of the project. But a full financing plan for the section, which sponsors expect to cost a minimum of $7.9 billion in 1980 dollars, has yet to be worked out.

The whole pipeline, from Alaska through Canada to the lower 48 states, is anticipated to cost more than $20 billion. In 1977, the original estimate for the project was $10 billion.

A second application filed this week by the U.S. sponsors asks for a single right-of-way through federal lands in Alaska for the pipeline. The U.S. interior department controls vast sections of Alaskan lands that the pipeline must cross.

John McMilian, chairman and chief executive of Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., operating partner in the U.S. consortium, says the pipeline will still follow "the same general route" as that proposed in 1977.

He added that the U.S. companies are urging U.S. federal agencies to move quickly on the applications filed this week "so that we may meet our planned start-up date uring the 1985-86 winter heating season."

Kidnap charges in Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A West Seattle man has been arrested on a kidnapping and extortion warrant in the abduction of a real estate agent held for $300,000 ransom in a downtown hotel.

John William Thompson, 32, was arrested Thursday, said Capt. John Leitch of the Seattle Police homicide unit. Bail was set at $250,000.

Thompson was charged in the warrant with kidnapping Florence Wan-Wan Tien, 47, an agent with MacPherson's Inc. Realtors, last Saturday, and attempting to extort $300,000 in ransom from her employer. No money was paid.

Ms. Tien had been lured to the downtown hotel by a man identifying himself as Jeff Morris who had met the saleswoman the previous day at her office, saying he wanted to buy a condominium.

Ms. Tien spent seven hours handcuffed and tied at the hotel before hopping into the hallway and getting help.

On any North American film location, Archie Bunker would have been easy to spot, but in Rome he was just one more rubbernecking tourist. Street map and pocket camera in hand, he interrupted the final climactic scene of The Salamander, stopping the star, Franco Nero, right in the middle of a frantic chase to ask in vintage Bunkerese, "Hey buddy, ya know where the Pantheon is?" Not a soul recognized Caroll O'Connor — except director Peter Zinner who found him vacationing with wife Nancy and talked the two of them into making the cameo appearance. The film, based on the Morris West novel, co-stars Sybil Danning, Eli Wallach and Anthony Quinn.

Cousteau

They've loved Loretta Lynn on the country music circuit for a long time. Now they're loving her at boxoffice and book store as well. David Skepner, her manager, says the movie, Coal Miner's Daughter, with Sissy Spacek in the title role, has grossed a whopping $52 million after 17 weeks. It, in turn, has fed sales of Loretta's autobiography on which it's based. Skepner says just under a million additional copies have been sold since March. And he adds, " At this early date people are starting to talk about an Academy Award nomination — if not the whole ball of wax — for Sissy."

Jacques Cousteau, 70, joined the crew of the Calypso to begin filming a two-hour documentary examining what has happened to aquatic life from offshore Newfoundland to the Great Lakes since North America was first penetrated by European settlers. The film, to be produced jointly by the National Film Board of Canada and the Cousteau Society, will be a "kind of epic of this penetration, which was one of the greatest adventures of mankind" the French oceanographer said.

Gordon Weaver and Stephen Rose, two New York movie producers, have hired Harriet Layton, wife of poet Irying Layton and movie publicist in her own right, to scout for original Canadian story ideas and scripts. "There are terrific resources in Canada," said Weaver. "Harriet's going to find them and we'll make them into movies. "I hope someone's going to call Harriet and say, 'I'm from Calgary. I don't know how to write, but I've got a wonderful story.' If we like the idea, we'll hire a writer and we'll get a winner out of that."

Dear Abby:

I am a 29-year-old bachelor with a problem concerning my preference in women. I am not a weirdo or kook who goes in for kinky sex. I am a normal, fairly successful professional man.

To get to the point, normal-size women do nothing for me. Fat women really turn me on — very obese women, the bigger the better.

The most satisfying sexual experience I've ever had was with a woman so fat that her belly practically hung down to her knees. (I never knew exactly how much she weighed, but she had to be at least 400 pounds.) Most men would probably have found her repulsive, but to me she was wonderfully exciting. Of course, I'd never be seen in public with such a woman.

I am not proud of the fact that I am ashamed to be seen with women whom I find fascinating in private. Should I see a psychiatrist about my unusual preference?

Withhold Name and City

Dear Withhold:

Yes, since you are ashamed of your preference and probably would be happier were you able to function as well with a "normal-size" woman. I see nothing wrong with your fascination for fat females, but there is something cruel and exploitive about using them only as sex objects.

Dear Abby:

I think anyone who starts his lawn mower before 8 a.m. should be shot! Whatever happened to common courtesy? What if a neighbor was up all night with a sick child? What if a neighbor works the night shift? What if a neighbor has a long-awaited, well-earned day off, and wants to catch up on a few extra hours of sleep?

I've never heard of anyone getting a prize for the first lawn mowed in the morning, and I've been at it for 35 years.

Sleepy-Time Gal

Dear Gal:

According to my mail, the early-morning mowing problem is a chronic pain in the ear to many.

Dear Abby:

I am 15 years old. Many times I have started to write to you about my problem, but I always end up throwing the letter in the wastepaper basket. I have finally summed up my problem with these three questions: 1) What is a friend? 2) How do you get friends? 3) How do you keep them?

Friendless

Dear Friendless:

A friend is someone who likes you and wants nothing of you but friendship. He doesn't like you less when you're crabby, moody or mean. He understands you. He can tell you when he thinks you're wrong without worrying about losing your friendship. And he forgives you without making a big deal out of it. You "get" friends by being the kind of person you want for a friend. You "keep" them by continuing to be that kind of person.

And then there's the gas . . .

By AL FORREST

It's almost impossible to find a motor home to rent at this time of year in Victoria — and maybe it's just as well.

The price tag ranges up to $700 per week, plus 15 cents per kilometre. Plus $35 a week for insurance.

And then there's the gas!

While you can drive your Honda, Toyota or Datsun from here to Disneyland on $52 worth of gasoline, it would cost $246 to fuel a large recreation vehicle. That's one-way.

The extra gas bill for a return trip is almost $400, the difference between $492 and $104.

People owning a mid-size Ford or Chevy do the trip on $90 each way.

The figures were calculated by the B.C. Automobile Association.

It is assumed that Canadian gas is in the tank until Seattle.

Gasoline prices average 25.1 cents a litre in B.C. but are about 33 cents below the border.

"Canadians should be assured that there is a good supply of gasoline in the United States this summer," says Kate Trotter of the BCAA.

"There might be one or two stations running dry late at night or on Sunday but generally the supply is excellent. Of course it is a bit expensive by our standards."

The BCAA calculates that the trip from Victoria to San Francisco costs $40 each way in a subcompact, $68 in a mid-size car and $188 in a motor home.

Meanwhile, the trip from here to Calgary uses $21 worth of gas in the subcompact, $37 in the mid-sized car and $100 in the RV.

From here to Prince George it is $15.75 in the subcompact, $27.55 in the mid-size and $74 in the RV.

Gasoline does not vary in price much across B.C.

Cheapest gas is in Chilliwack where competition from a co-op has the level at 24.3 per litre.

In Vancouver it is 24.8 plus .72 for the urban transit authority for a total of about 25.5.

In Victoria it is 25 even (we pay for the Urban Transit Authority through a surcharge on hydro bills rather than on gas) and 24.8 in Nanaimo.

Gasoline is a bit more expensive in the interior, running up to 26.1 in Prince George and 28.1 in Nelson, but below American prices.

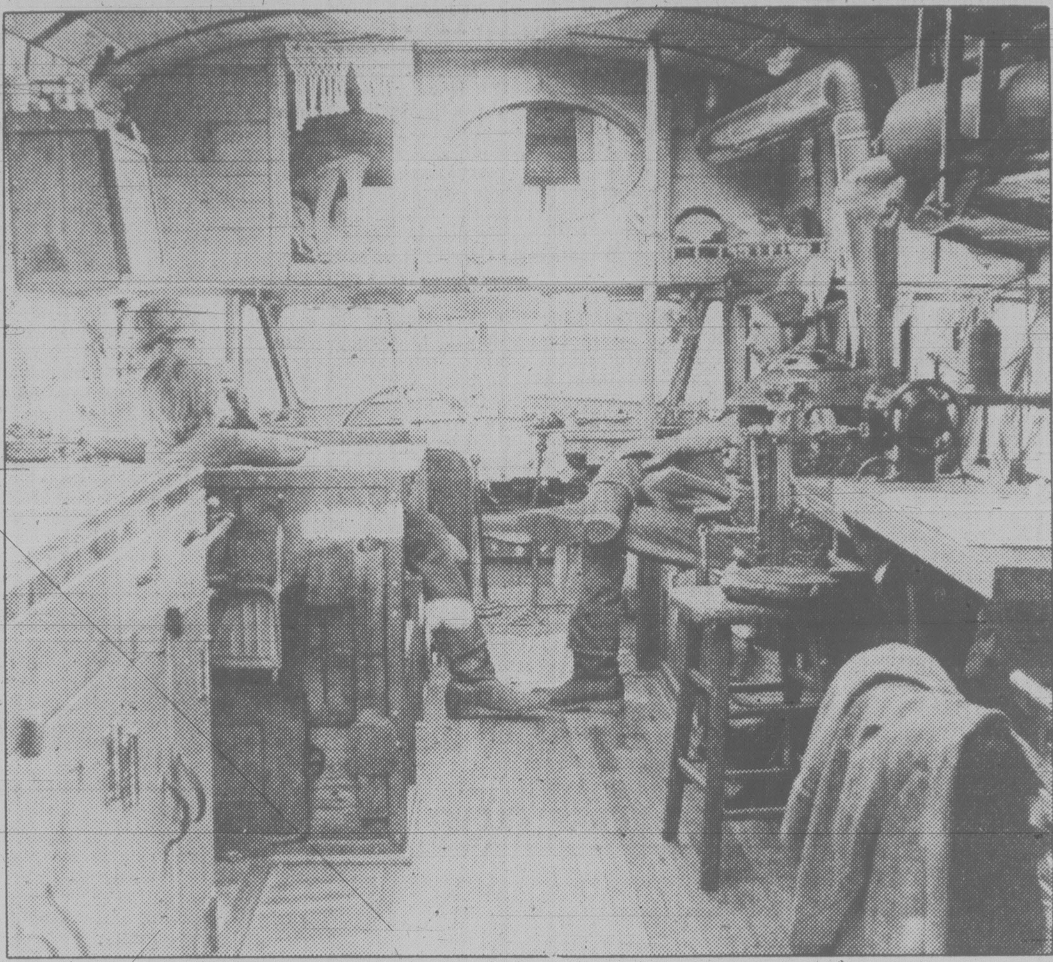
Meanwhile, a survey of Victoria and Vancouver RV centres showed there is almost nothing left to rent this summer.

In Vancouver the Times contacted all 16 companies in the phone book and found 14 had nothing left.

One place offered an 18-foot unit at $375 per week plus 10 cents a kilometre but demanded a minimum of two weeks at a time.

The only other centre with an RV available asked $675 per week plus 15 cents per kilometre for a 24-foot vehicle.

In Victoria few rental units are available at any time — and at this time of year they can only be obtained when there is a cancellation. The rates start around $250 a week plus eight cents a kilometre.



SAM WOLFENSON and his family have been living in this bus for years. Equipped with all the comforts of home, the vehicle has travelled throughout Canada and the U.S. Pacific Northwest. The Wolfensons are from the U.S. but say they have no home state because they are always on the move.

Summer in back yard not always the safest

By ANN RUSSELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Summer offers an abundance of warm, hazy days for puttering around the flower bed, caring for the lawn or weeding the vegetable garden.

But while gardeners bring out their electric gear and insecticides, the Canada Safety Council is preparing to record another summer of gardening mishaps.

The council says most accidents are the result of carelessness or misuse of equipment.

Proper protective attire should be worn while using dangerous machines. The electric trimmer, which has become increasingly popular in the last two years, makes the council especially nervous. Its fast-spinning nylon cord can inflict painful injuries to unprotected ankles and toes.

Topping the list of electrical injuries are those caused by worn or improperly used plugs.

For instance, in Richmond last summer a 16-year-old boy wearing only shorts and sneakers was moving the lawn on a slight incline under a tree. He stooped to control the machine and the neckchain he was wearing swung down, the medallion catching the plug where it had separated slightly from the extension cord. The youth received a severe shock.

He found himself in a nearby ditch and suffered a nasty burn where the chain had circled his neck.

Although most people think of gardening as the safest leisure activity, gardening accidents can be fatal. The council strongly recommends use of ground fault interrupters on outdoor plugs. They already are required by law around pool areas.

P. J. Farmer, the council's executive director says that while the ground plug on a three-pin cord grounds the actual machine, it offers no protection from a frayed or severed plug.

"The ground fault interrupter senses that the current is no longer balanced and immediately cuts it off, preventing a severe shock," said Farmer.

Almost any hardware store sells the interrupters for about $55. The council recommends that you leave one permanently installed on your outdoor plug if you use a snowblower or plug in your car.

"All pesticides are poisons, used to kill certain plants or animals," said Dr. Dieter Riedel of the health protection branch of Welfare Canada.

"They must be handled with extreme care. Most pesticides used in gardening are domestic products and if they are handled properly, there should be no hazard."

The council recommends that pesticide users read the label carefully and follow instructions to the letter.

"The right dilution is very important when mixing insecticides," warns Riedel.

"If the mixture is too strong it can damage the plants and if it is too weak it will be ineffective."

Always keep dangerous chemicals out of children's reach and avoid spraying on windy days.

Our province highest for university tuition

OTTAWA (CP) — University students will pay as little as $340 or as much as $1,990 in tuition fees to study arts this coming academic year.

A Statistics Canada report on tuition and residence fees in Canada's 53 universities shows that for 1980-81, the best bets for universities — at least cost-wise — are in Quebec, Alberta, Manitoba and Newfoundland.

Quebec has by far the cheapest tuition rates, with the University of Montreal boasting the lowest fees for arts at $340. The other six institutions in the province all offer similar courses for $570 annually or less.

Universities in Alberta, Manitoba and Newfoundland charge no more than $630 to arts students. Saskatchewan is not far behind and several British Columbia universities also levy rates below $600.

But British Columbia also tops the other end of the scale, with Trinity Western College charging a whopping $1,990 for one year of arts.

All three Maritime provinces are expensive, with tuition fees for bachelor of arts students reaching $935 annually at New Brunswick's Mount Allison University and topping the $900 mark at several others.

Blood pressure commonly fluctuates

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

The company that our son works for sent him to a doctor for a physical examination. The purpose was to take out extra insurance, one of the benefits that the company offered. His blood pressure was so high that he was denied insurance. The next day he went to his own doctor who told him his blood pressure was normal. He is strong and healthy, but we are afraid he might be harboring something that has not yet surfaced.

Mrs. N.P.P.

Dear Mrs. P.:

Extreme tension, nervousness or anxiety during a physical examination can frequently cause wide fluctuations in blood pressure readings. This kind of temporary high blood pressure is called "labile" hypertension. All that it means is that there is a momentary change in blood pressure levels without any apparent physical reason for the change.

Almost everyone has felt a pounding-in-the-heart sensation and a quickening of the heartbeat during a moment of great excitement or stress. This is a reaction to psychological tensions identical with a sudden rise in blood pressure.

The fact that your son's blood pressure returned to normal when taken by his own doctor is a good indication that there is no intrinsic disease. I am certain that his doctor will communicate his findings to the insurance company doctor. After rechecking, your son will undoubtedly "pass" the examination.

Even doctors who know their patients very well sometimes note a transient rise in blood pressure during a routine examination. That is why doctors so often chat and put the patient at ease in order to let their heart rate and respiration quiet down.

Dear Doctor:

What does vitamin B12 do for the body? Would an overdose be harmful?

— Miss D.T.

Dear Miss T.:

Vitamin B12 is only one part of the vitamin B complex. Vitamin B12 is involved in tissue growth and in blood formation. Red blood cells and nerve tissue are affected by it.

Its greatest importance in modern medicine is in its use for pernicious anemia. B12 is found in large quantities in green vegetables, liver, beef, pork, organ meats, eggs, milk and milk products.

The overdosage of B12 is just as wasteful as the overuse of any vitamin. A normal, nutritious diet should supply enough vitamin B12 to satisfy the body's daily requirements. Strict vegetarian diets are often deficient in this vitamin — and then larger doses are required.

Macho mellowing as the world turns

By JOHN GOUDAS

Peter Brouwer on As The World Turns is resident macho man Brad Hollister, who first appeared on the show last December with unbridled wavy, reddish-blond hair and a sinister handlebar mustache. His ominous demeanor was just magentic enough to spark the romantic interest of some of Oakdale's finest women. However, Brad's basic motivation is a consuming desire for wealth and power, and this single-minded ambition has resulted in a "devil-may-care" attitude toward women.

Fortunately, as much as Brad is a womanizer, Peter Brouwer is a charmer who gets excited by life's simpler pleasures.

Last year, for example, when he left the role of Dr. Joe Cusack in Love of Life, Peter became a landscape architect or as he simply refers to it, a gardener. Peter loves the physical nature of the work. Quite admirably he was also involved in projects with Central Park Task Force in the Big Apple.

Brouwer

"It gave me a chance to make New York more beautiful," Peter said proudly.

He claims he'd still be doing just that if the opportunity on As the World Turns had not presented itself, bringing about a real change in Peter's life. Suddenly he found that his rigorous schedule didn't always allow for his special interests — gardening, bird-watching, basketball, and long walks in the woods.

However, Peter's found himself recharged lately by the change that's occurring in Brad. His hair has been cut, the mustache trimmed, as Brad's finally realizing how he's mistreated people mostly because of the recent disasters in his own life — his near fatal injuries when a section of the silver mines collapsed, his father's death, and his unsuccessful attempts to win the affections of a woman he really loves.

"So now he's going to straighten out a little bit," says Peter as a playful grin makes its way across his face, "but not forever; and therein lies the fun of doing a daytime serial."

It seems that Brad's not the only one who's changing, though. About a year and a half ago, Peter married Cindy Veazey, an actress turned production coordinator, who got Peter involved in his first feature film, Friday the 13th, which has been doing phenomenonally well at the box office. The couple bought a house in suburbia and are expecting their first child in September.

Channel Chatter: Kevin Bacon (Tim Werner) of Guiding Light definitely can get the most mileage out of a day. Currently in a stage production entitled Album at Manhattan's W.P.A. Theater, Kevin drove to Connecticut after a performance to participate in some Guiding Light location shooting. He arrived at 2 a.m., began working through the early morning hours and most of the following day, finally leaving at 5 p.m. for that evening's theatre performance...

Following in the footsteps of Pro Football's Harry Carson who appeared on One Life to Live, New York Ranger hockey star Ron Greschner will make a guest appearence (as himself) on Ryan's Hope July 14,..

Ploy Portents: Will Sister Marie try a second time with Alex on Days of Our Lives or will Leslie dazzle the busy man? Meanwhile, loner Joshua doesn't run from Jessica, but shuns the ever flirting Liz.

by mike lamm

Dear Mike:

The 2.3-litre engine in my 1977 Pinto starts okay; but when I want to drive forward, it stalls. Four trips to the shop netted no improvement. The Ford mechanic put in a new fast-idle cam, but the problem continues, and it's worse in cold weather. Please help.

Stalling Out

Dear Stalling:

Your choke might not be sealing well, or maybe it's out of adjustment. Another possibility is the accelerator pump inside the carburetor. It might be worn.

Dear Mike:

I'd like to put in my two cents about the guy whose Chevy van dripped six drops of oil a night. You told him to forget it — six drops weren't worth worrying about. Well, I disagree. Years ago I owned a 1947 Chevrolet that also dripped about six drops of oil per night. I was told not to worry, but soon afterward the oil line to the external oil filter broke and resulted in a burnt-up engine. My sister's Chevy also had a "minor" oil leak, which we again traced to the filter line. This time we replaced it before it broke. So when your engine is trying to tell you something, it's always best to listen.

Been There

Dear Been:

You're absolutely right. My advice to the owner of the Chevy van should have been to find out why his engine was leaking. Cars no longer have external oil lines, but it might have been something just as potentially dangerous. I stand corrected, and I thank you.

Dear Mike:

Please settle an argument. To get a accurate tire-pressure reading in the summertime, is it best to check tires when they're cool, any time of the day, or to drive a couple of miles before checking them?

Hoping to Win

Dear Hoping:

Always check tire pressure with the tires cool, never after driving any length of time. And as an aside, I recommend pumping up all car tires to 32 psi for normal driving, no matter what the manufacturer's specs call for.

Dear Mike:

What would cause the fanbelt to jump off the water-pump pulley of my 1973 Cadillac? It's done this three times now, and I'm afraid I'll burn out my engine one of these days.

Leaping Belts

Dear Leaping:

Look for a broken cord in the belt. Also check for pulley misalignment, a too-loose belt, or if there are two belts involved, they might be mismatched.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I'm a 17-year-old girl. My problem is my sister, 19. Last year she was in the hospital, because she tried to kill herself. She was under care for about five months. She still sees a psychiatrist, twice a week, but I don't think it's doing her any good, except that she doesn't try to kill herself.

I don't think she knows how much it hurt my mom when she was in the hospital. I've seen my mom cry, and at those times, I really hated my sister and wished she had succeeded in killing herself.

Answer: I can understand that life at home must be difficult for you. When someone in the home is as unhappy as your sister appears to be, it can make difficulties for everyone. She is dumping some of her unhappiness on you, on your parents.

It is good she is going to a psychiatrist who will try to help her discover why she is so mixed up — trying to change one's own feelings and behavior can be difficult and frustrating.

But you still have to live with her while she is sorting things out, and that is not always easy. However, your sister may need your help, more than your anger, and I wonder if you have ever tried to talk with her about her problems, as well as your own. People who act as angry as your sister often feel very much alone and need someone in the family to reach out.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am 16 years old, and I would like to go on the Pill. I'm wondering if I'm old enough to get it without parental permission. I'd prefer to go to a clinic rather than our family doctor.

Also, if the doctor found something wrong with me during the physical examination, would he notify my parents? My parents would never understand if they found out, so this must be confidential.

Answer: This is the dilemma that many young women your age have to face. Parents also face a dilemma when they realize they are not consulted by their teenage children about many of the decisions they are making, particularly those that relate to sex and contraception.

In practice, you are old enough to make this decision. The visit you make, any information you give, any results from any examination will be held in strict confidence.

The procedure at a clinic would be about the same as at your family doctor. The main difference will be that a counsellor at the clinic will spend as much time as you wish talking to you.

First, you will fill in a form which includes medical history, nenstrual history and routine questions about your health. Next, you will talk to a counsellor about birth control methods. Instructions about their proper use will usually include a discussion of your relationship and the reasons you are having sex, to make you think about the choices you have.

After this counselling session, you will have a physical examination. If you are going to take the Pill, this will include an internal or a pelvic examination. To the surprise of most women, it is much less painful and unpleasant than they imagine.

This examination should be repeated annually and will include a Pap smear and a test for infection or venereal disease. This examination will conclude with giving you a prescription for the type of birth control you will be using. It may be the Pill, but it may be a diaphragm or condoms and foam.

Dear Dr. Levine:

My parents are getting a divorce. I've tried everything to keep them together. I think I am going crazy. What should I do?

Answer: One mistakenly gets the impression that because divorce is so common nowadays, everyone involved — husband, wife, kids — takes it cooly and nonchalantly. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The whole divorce process is still a living hell for most people who experience it.

What you are describing is part of that hell. You are confused, frightened, angry and sad. You feel frustrated and impotent. For all your efforts and tears and rages, your parents are still going through with the divorce.

You are going through a crisis, and you are in the initial stages of shock and disbelief. Time, changing conditions, personal growth, support and advice, will guide you through this whole process, until you can cope with the unpleasant realities involved.

Working together a practical value

TORONTO (CP) — More couples are not only living together but working together — and with corporate blessings.

"There used to be some resistance to the idea of husband and wife working together, but I think industry is being forced to place more and more value on productivity," says industrial sociologist Sy Eber, director of corporate affairs at Manufacturers Life Insurance Co.

When couples meet at work and later marry, the bride doesn't clean out her desk and go home to be a housewife. She or her new husband are more likely to transfer to a new department.

"As women gain the qualifications to make them top contenders for jobs, corporations just can't afford to worry about where their spouses work," Eber says.

Matt and Anita Miller agree.

Married two years, Matt, 30, is a senior graphic artist. Anita, 26, is a production controller at Manufacturers Life.

They don't consider themselves pioneers but, "as a married couple who work together, we don't want to blow it for other people who might want to do the same thing," Matt says.

Lawyer Adam Vereshack, assistant counsel for International Business Machines, where his wife, Janet, is an information officer, is surprised by married friends who say they couldn't work together.

"I think it's an old wives' tale that it's difficult to work together," Adam says. "I mean, if you get along after work and on weekends, why would it be any different on the job?"

But the working couples try to separate home and work life.

"We find we just don't talk shop," Matt said. "If something's really bothering one of us, sure, we'll discuss it. But if you really get into talking about problems with work or the people at work, it just takes over your whole life."

Matt admits that if they had personal problems at home or one of them was doing poorly at work it would "blow things sky high."

But Janet Vereshack says a couple who enjoy their work and like the company tend to reinforce one another's good feelings about their employers.

Flavia Morrison, public affairs spokesman for Air Canada, says the company encourages close relatives to apply for work.

"If someone says on the application form that they have a close relative who works for us, we automatically interview them," she said. "It lets us know the person applying for the job has heard positive things about the company."

While company policies on hiring spouses vary, many permit it but say they would transfer one spouse to another department when a vacancy arose. Companies refuse to have one spouse supervise the other or permit one to have access to confidential information.

A snappy retrieval

NORTH CALDWELL, N.J. (AP) — Patricia Kennedy's purse was stolen, but she got it back by way of her turtle.

It all began when the doctoral candidate in zoology at Rutgers University left her lab in Newark to take a snapping turtle to the Morris County wildlife refuge.

At a Newark stoplight, a man reached into the front seat of her station wagon and snatched her purse, which contained a transmitter to be attached to the turtle's back for easy tracking when the female snappers deposit their eggs on land.

Kennedy activated the transmitter's receiver and accompanied by police traced the signal to an abandoned lot near the scene of the robbery.

The purse was found intact except for some money missing.

As for the transmitter, it's back where it belongs — fastened to the turtle.

Kathryn Wishlow talks with one of 150 clients in her portfolio

More women in business as brokers

TORONTO (CP) — From penny pinchers of modest household budgets to money brokers of six-figure sums, women are scoring in the dizzying world of high finance.

"Women have been running family budgets and buying bargains for so long there's no reason they can't do this even if it's on a grander scale," says Kathryn Wishlow, a 26-year-old retail stockbroker.

Since her foray into the field last fall with the Toronto investment firm Walwyn Stodgell Cochran Murray Ltd., she's racked up an impressive portfolio of 150 clients.

"Touch wood," she says, looking around for something solid to rap on, "I haven't lost them money yet."

Mrs. Wishlow reflects a new breed of businesswoman — the retail stockbroker.

Since the market's resurgence about three years ago, the ranks of investment dealers have blossomed with women. Ten per cent of the country's 15,000 licensed representatives are women, most of them starting after 1974.

Young and ambitious, they are lured into the business by prospects of financial rewards easily topping $30,000 a year and the competitive excitement of a fickle, volatile market.

Although it's rare not to find at least one woman broker on the staff of most investment firms, stories circulate about the difficulty some applicants have gaining a toehold in the prestigious brokerage houses.

Company spokesmen counter, saying so many capable women are beating a path to their doors that on-campus recruiting for candidates is no longer necessary.

"They come highly educated and whistle through their licensing exams lickety split," says Eric Donnelly, Ontario sales manager for the national investment firm, Midland-Doherty Ltd.

"It's got to the point where we don't even have to advertise."

The brokerage house Nesbitt Thomson Bongard Inc. has 23 women on its national sales staff, up from only two or three a few years ago.

Midland's sales force is 12-per-cent female, about 45 of them.

And Donnelly says women continue to be bullish about the business. A growing number are moving from retail brokering to "where the action is" — options strategies, floor trading and money markets.

Novelist fights order to disclose

TORONTO (CP) — The author of a novel about a double agent working for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police counter-espionage unit is appealing a Supreme Court of Ontario ruling that he must answer questions about his sources for the novel.

Ian Adams, author of S: Portrait of a Spy, said Thursday he has launched an appeal of last week's ruling by Mr. Justice D. H. Sandler upholding a request by Leslie James Bennett that Adams answer questions about his sources.

Bennett, a former RCMP intelligence chief launched a suit against Adams in 1977 for libel in connection with the book, in which the character known as S is an RCMP officer who also works for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the Soviet Union secret service (KGB).

Bennett, who retired from the RCMP in 1972 and now lives in Australia, says in the suit, still in pre-trial stages, that the book identifies him as S.

Adams first refused to answer the questions in Febraury, 1979, and the motion to force him to answer them was argued in June, 1979, said Paul Copeland, Adams lawyer. Copeland said he will argue that the questions are not relevant to Adams's contention that he didn't intend to refer to the plaintiff in his book.

In his written judgment, Sandler said novelists do not have a legal right to protect their sources and the answers are relevant to Adams's contention.

If Adams loses the appeal and still refuses to answer the questions, he may be considered in contempt of court, said Julian Porter, Bennett's lawyer, "and that'll be another story."

Adams, a former reporter with Maclean's magazine, said forcing him to reveal his sources would set a precedent for Canadian journalists.

"I don't think there's any established legal precedent that journalists can protect their sources," he said. "We don't have a constitution that guarantees freedom of the press.

"This has enormous repercussions for freedom of expression." Adams said the ruling constitutes "a monstrous form of harassment."

He said if there was any libel committed in the case it was by Toronto Sun editor Peter Worthington, who he said was the first person to allege publicly that Bennett could be S.

Worthington, however, said the question of a connection between Bennett and the character in the novel was later raised in Parliament and in a parliamentary justice committee, as well as in other news media.

"If Bennett thought I committed libel he would have sued me," said Worthington.

Air controllers slowdown ends

OTTAWA (CP) — Air traffic control assistants agreed Thursday to end a work slowdown less than 24 hours after it began when the federal government agreed to listen to their demand for a job reclassification that would provide higher wages.

Flights from airports across the country were delayed up to an hour as a result of the assistants booking off sick or working to rule in nearly every province. The slowdown was to end as late afternoon and evening shifts began.

Yvon Demers, executive-secretary of the Union of Canadian Transport Employees representing about 350 assistants, said the union agreed to restore normal operations after top transport officials said they would meet with the employees next week to discuss the demand on condition the slowdown was immediately ended.

"We have all indications everything is back to normal," a Transport Canada spokesman said late Thursday afternoon.

The assistants , who prepare flight plans, operate computers and perform other functions for air traffic controllers, are demanding a shift in classification to the general technical group of the public service from the clerical and regulatory group they now are in. The union says this is a 10-year-old arequest.

The shift would provide a more appropriate recognition of their skills and would add between $3,000 and $4,000 to their annual wage, now an average of aboul $16,000, Demers said.

The slowdown caused inconvenience to the travelling public but did not jeopardize safety, union and government spokesmen said.

In Montreal, only three of 11 assistants showed up for the day shift at Dorval airport. The rest booked off sick as did others at Malton, St. Hubert and Moncton, N.B., a transport spokesman said.

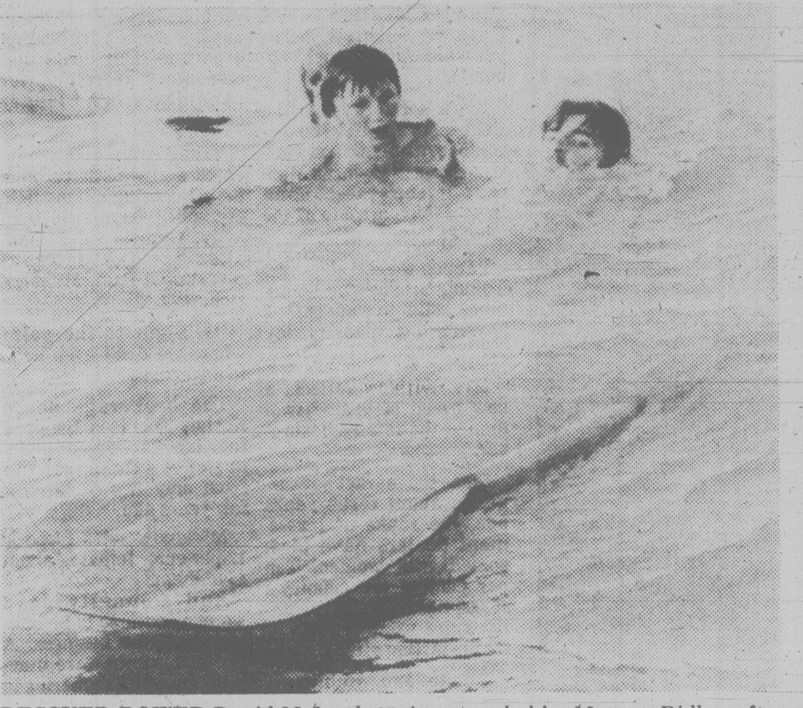
In Toronto, spokesmen for Air Canada, CP Air and Eastern Airlines reported most arrivals and departures were delayed at least 15 minutes.

The manager of air traffic control tower-terminal operations in Toronto said assistants were late in providing flight information to air traffic controllers, causing delays of 15 minutes to an hour. A computer used to provide flight information was out of orderovernight.

In Vancouver, flight planning operations were slowed. In Quesnel, B.C., pilotu faced half-hour delays in filing flight plans.

Demers said he warned transport officials twice in the last week or so they should come to grips with the demand soon.

"They didn't take us seriously when I told them things were getting pretty hostile in the field," he said.



RESCUED ROWER David McLeod, 15, is untangled by Murray Ridley after the rowing shell he was steering capsized in the Detroit River near Windsor, Ont. Thursday. Windsor Rowing Club members said McLeod bacame tangled in a rope attached to the boat but was saved by Ridley and another man who were following in a club coaching boat.

CBA chief hits Bank Act delay

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert MacIntosh, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, minced few words Thursday as he criticized federal plans to extend the Bank Act for another five months.

"The impression left by this further delay reflects unfavorably on the ability of the governmental process to get on with public business," he said in a statement issued in Toronto.

"It also creates an unfavorable image of Canada in the eyes of the world financial community, which is watching the process with astonishment."

The failure of the government to win speedy approval of a new Bank Act forced it to get Commons approval after only 40 minutes of debate Wednesday to extend the existing act until Nov. 30.

The extension, the fourth in four years, was needed to keep the banks in operation until the new act wins approval.

MacIntosh accused a small group of MPs of holding up progress on the new legislation and said there's no reason why it couldn't be passed before Parliament adjourns for the summer.

However, opposition party spokesman interviewed earlier Thursday said several major issues are still left to be resolved and accused the government of slowing up the process by digging in its heels to further amendments.

Progressive Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens said the Liberals have failed to justify some of the changes proposed in the new act and have become "totally inflexible" on some of the concerns raised by MPs.

Illegal walkout halts Alta. liquor deliveries

EDMONTON (CP) — An illegal walkout by workers at Alberta liquor control board warehouses in Edmonton and Calgary moved into its second day Thursday, stopping delivery of liquor to hotels, restaurants and retail outlets in the province.

The 200 workers are members of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. They walked off the job Wednesday although government legislation prohibits them from going on strike.

The action was a surprise to union officials. Bill Finn, public relations director, said the union is investigating and hopes to arrange meetings with the workers.

No reason was given for the walkout but it is reported to be a protest against flagging wage negotiations that broke off Monday.

Deputy chairman Ken Baker said he is not sure how long liquor board stores can remain open without shipments.

"We are ready to resume negotiations at any time," Baker said.

The walkout came a few days before planned strike votes by beer workers in the province. Beer was delivered to stores Wednesday but the supply could end if brewery workers vote to shut down the industry within the next couple of weeks.

It would be the province's third summer-time beer drought in as many years.

Workers at Molson's have set a strike vote for Monday and a spokesman said Labatt's workers will consult with conciliator John Peters to find an appropriate date for a similar vote.

Jim Scott, lawyer for the union local at the Alberta Brewers Agents, said warehouse workers will probably vote Tuesday.

Phil Ponting, negotiator for the Breweries Employers Industrial Relations Association, said he had not seen the conciliation report and had no comment.

Refinery out of mothballs?

LONDON (CP) — Shaheen Natural Resources Co. Inc., of New York, builders of the mothballed oil refinery at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., have announced a $616-million proposal to re-purchase the refinery.

The London-based Avalon Co., a subsidiary of Shaheen, made the offer Thursday to the British government's Export Credits Guarantee Department, prime mortgage holders on the refinery.

"Plans to secure financial backing from world classed banks have been in the works for the past year," said Shaheen Vice-President Jesse Taub, "but any similarity in timing between our announcement and talks between Petro-Can and the Newfoundland government are pure coincidence."

The offer has a minimum guarantee payment of $17 million the first year to the ECGD with a promise to pay off the balance of the $125-million mortgage held by the department over six years.

Following recovery of the first mortgage, 25 per cent of the cash flow would be dedicated to reducing the second mortgage held by Newfoundland for a total payment of $41 million over seven years.

But Avalon president John Shaheen who suffered in 1976 one of the biggest bankruptcies in Canada's history, says he feels a moral obligation to repay all the creditors."

Maximum payment in full to all creditors totals $616 million. Taub said that Shaheen has arranged a $200-million credit line to provide working capital should operations resume.

"The export refinery would be operational within four months of acquisition and a work force of 450 would be hired."

Fireman charged after wife's body dug up

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto fireman has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of his missing wife, whose beaten body was found Thursday in a 1½-metre grave on the family's cottage property in the Haliburton area.

Keith Roderick Odwell, 45, reported his wife, Shiela, missing May 6. He told police she left home April 29 to visit a sister in Nelson, B.C., but the 43-year-old woman never arrived.

Police found Odwell visiting a friend in Toronto and took him in for questioning. He accompanied police to the cottage.

Police said they believe the woman was beaten to death in her Toronto home April 28.

Japanese car sales booming

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales of Japanese cars in Canada more than doubled in April as car buyers continued to shun North American cars, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

It released figures showing over-all new car sales are declining at a rate of four per cent this year over last, but Japanese car sales are up 107 per cent.

Japanese cars were most popular in Manitoba, where sales were up 156 per cent in April, and in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island combined, where sales increased 132 per cent.

Japanese car manufacturers captured 12.8 per cent of the market for new cars in Canada in April.

Purchases of cars made in Canada and the United States declined by 13 per cent in April, which is reflected in 750,000 layoffs in the auto industry in the United States and 30,000 in Canada.

Demand for new cars manufactured in Europe has dropped off everywhere in the country except in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

While sales of all types of cars are declining on average, they are in fact increasing in five provinces: Newfoundland, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. But these increases are more than offset by declines in the remaining five provinces.

MUSICMAN

It is 2 months since the first MUSICMAN guitars and amps came through our door. Since that day, the response from South Island MUSICIANS has been overwhelming! Old FENDERS, New FENDERS, MARSHALL, HI WATT and GIBSON have all been traded in by players that have finally heard what's been in their heads all along.

WHY MUSICMAN?

"Careful quality control, new products, from new ideas. A willingness to listen to music men who explain their needs and problems." That's why!

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate

THOMPSON—In loving memory of Don Thompson, loving father and husband who passed away July 2, 1976.
A light is from our household gone
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Some may think you are forgotten
Though on earth you are no more;
But in memory you are with us
As you always were before.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the presence of mine
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my

Coal mine development deterred by politics: expert

VANCOUVER (CP) — Politics is a major hurdle in the way of making coal Canada's major energy source, a University of B.C. coal mining expert says.

George Poling, head of the mining and mineral processing engineering department, said Canada's rapidly growing energy consumption, coupled with slower growth of oil and natural gas production, means coal is the energy source in Canada's future.

Governments have recently acknowledged the importance of coal to Canada's energy self-sufficiency, but, he said, frequent changes of government make it hard to plan long-range industrial developments.

"There are 15 to 20 plants on the drawing board for B.C., depending on the cost of energy. But the plants take 20 or 30 years (to develop) and governments only last for four years."

The coal in B.C.'s northeastern fields has been called the champagne of coking coal, he said. It is lower in sulphur, volatility and ash production, making it attractive to Japan and other coal-using countries.

Increasing demands for coal production makes it essential for B.C. to develop those coal deposits immediately, he said.

A single coal mine producing five million tonnes of coal a year over a 20-year period would generate $2 billion in revenues for each of the provincial and federal governments and $2.5 billion in rail revenues, he said.

Costs of developing northeast B.C. coal fields are comparatively small compared with the potential revenues. But public pressure is necessary to force governments into action, and Canadians have not yet felt the pressures of an energy shortage.

Ottawa has promised to spend $39 million for construction of a coal terminal at Ridley Island near Prince Rupert on the north coast of B.C. Canadian National Railways is going to upgrade its main line to Prince Rupert from Prince George to carry coal and grain.

Meanwhile, Teck Corp., Denison Mines Ltd. and British Petroleum are negotiating a multi-billion-dollar deal with Japanese steel companies for 6.5 million tonnes of metallurgical coal a year over 15 years.

"Canada has only four per cent of the world's projected coal reserves, but if you took it on a per capita basis we're very rich in coal," Poling said.

B.C. reserves are estimated at 20 to 60 billion tonnes a year. If Canada's current energy needs were filled entirely by coal, 600 million tonnes would have to be mined each year, rather than the 30 million tonnes now mined. In that case, Poling said, B.C.'s reserve would provide enough coal for up to 100 years.

Southeastern B.C. mayors said Ottawa's decision spells problems for coal operations in their area.

Cranbrook Mayor Tye Colgur, a spokesman for East Kootenay mayors said the overworked Roberts Bank coal port, south of Vancouver, won't be expanded until the Ridley Island port at Prince Rupert is operational in 1983.

He said this would delay increases in exports of southeastern B.C. coal.

Colgur said an alternative may be to reactivate a rail link from the East Kootenay to the U.S., using Burlington Northern Railway tracks. Coal shipments then could go through the ports of Seattle or San Fransisco.

2-4D probe urged

Surrey NDP MLA Ernest Hall has demanded an immediate government investigation into the use of the herbicide 2-4D and the cancellation of all licences permitting its use.

"There is considerable evidence that the herbicide can cause birth-defects and cancer," Hall said Thursday. "Recent studies have also found neurological damage resulting in permanent paralysis in some cases."

He said the herbicide is used for pest-control in rural areas of the province and this should be halted pending a full inquiry.

All-winter pleasure from July flowers

While you are enjoying the beauty of the flowers in your garden during this early summer period, it's worthwhile giving a thought to preserving a few of them for winter decorations, as I pointed out in one of my columns last week.

I mentioned that some can be dried just by hanging them in a dry, dark place. Strawflower, statice and ornamental grasses are picked, the leaves stripped off. They are tied in small bunches with elastic bands and hung upside down to dry.

But even more of your annual flowers can be preserved for the winter by the simple method of burying blossoms in a drying agent to preserve their natural look. Apartment dwellers can indulge in this with flowers they receive from gardening friends, if they have been picked with that purpose in mind.

Most kinds of garden flowers can be dried but the most satisfying are zinnias, marigolds, roses, small dahlias and asters. I have found that carnations and chrysanthemums tend to shrivel and lose their petals.

The two best agents are silica gel and sand of the sort sold for sandboxes. Sand is the least expensive if you want to dry flowers in any quantity. Any box or pan with tight seams can serve as a receptacle; simply line the container with wax paper.

Silica gel reduces drying time and produces the brightest color and for this you will need a cake tin with a tight-fitting lid. The technique of covering the blooms is the same for both agents and both are re-usable.

Unlike flowers to be gathered for fresh bouquets, whose moisture must be conserved by picking them in the cool of the morning or evening, flowers for drying are picked in the heat of the day when there is the least amount of moisture in the petals. They should never be gathered for drying after a rain nor when they are wet with dew or after standing in an arrangement.

Pass up blossoms that show signs of age. Gather them when their color is brightest and just before the centres of the flowers unfold. Have your equipment ready so you can process the flowers immediately.

Remove the stems from zinnias, marigolds and other similar flowers. Replace the stems with a two-inch (5 cm) length of 19-gauge florist wire inserted into the blossom.

Lay daisy-type blossoms face down on a one-inch layer of drying agent. Begin by pouring sand or silica gel around the edge of the petals, piling it up to the base of the wire stem.

Thicker and more intricately shaped flowers like marigolds should be placed face up. Build the drying agent up around the outside, then fill in between the petals to equalize pressure and prevent mashing.

Follow a similar procedure with spiky blooms such as snapdragons but rest them horizontally. Tap the edges of the box to eliminate air pockets, then cover any exposed parts of blossoms.

You can leave the box open if you're using sand. Mark the date and the flower's name to estimate the correct time for removal. Never mix flowers of different types nor stack in more than one layer.

Drying time varies according to flower bulk or thickness. In silica gel, simple open flowers may take only two or three days while thick, bulky marigolds may require five days to a week or more depending on size. In sand, flowers lose moisture more slowly.

Avoid uncovering until the blooms are completely dry. Exposing the blooms too soon causes irreversible wilting. You can test first by brushing off enough of the drying agent to feel the tip of a petal. If the petal feels crisp to the touch, pour off the rest.

Well-dried flowers will last one or two years if caredully handled to avoid shattering. Display arrangements in a dry room, out of direct sunlight or high humidity that can fade dried flowers or cause them to collapse.

CAN-CAN MONUMENT constructed by Japanese high school students from soft drink cans is doing something of litter on the street of Kamakura. The cans are strung together on a cardboard frame. The 10,000 cans were put together to look like a bird, but it didn't quite make it.

Brazil's economic policies sharply attacked by Pope

Los Angeles Times

SAO PAULO — Pope John Paul II went before the workers of Brazil Thursday evening and defended the fundamental rights of labor while criticizing the economic policy of the Brazilian government with surprising sharpness.

He reaffirmed the traditional Vatican support of workers' associations without using the word "union" and of action to defend their interests without using the word "strike."

A society is menaced when "the distribution of goods are based only on economic laws of growth and a bigger profit, when the results of progress reach only superficially the huge layers of the population," he said in a clear reference to Brazilian policy.

The speech was interpreted by church progressives here as a vote of confidence for Cardinal Paulo Evarista Arns, the 58-year-old archbishop of Sao Paulo, who has stirred bitter controversy by leading the church in support of the unions. Some 20,000 business people and other critics signed a protest petition against Arns earlier this year. The petition was sent to the Pope.

The confrontation entered here by the church has been sometimes violent. This was dramatized at the papal Mass when Dalmo Dallari, a lawyer and vice-president of the archdiocese Commission on Justice and Peace, had to be helped to the lectern to read the second lesson. He had been attacked Wednesday night by four unidentified men and severely beaten.

"This is a sign of what happens to those who work for justice in Sao Paulo," Bishop Celso Queiroz, an auxiliary bishop, told the hundreds of thousands in a central park as the lawyer was led to his place before the Mass.

The Pope received a noisy and excited reception when he flew here Thursday morning to Latin America's largest city urban area of 7 million. The cheering, chanting and singing at the midday Mass delayed the beginning of his remarks for 10 minutes.

In Rio de Janeiro, priests in the Favela do Vidigal said they had not yet decided what to do with the precious and treasured gold ring that the Pope, apparently in a spontaneous gesture, had given to the slum parish Wednesday.

The Pope's address to 150,000 workers gathered in Morumbi Stadium, strong in its defence of human rights and the cause of justice, also emphasized once again that the law must be respected, that violence must be avoided along with solutions based on demagogy, ideology or "cold and theoretic scientism.

"To hope that solutions of the problems of salary, social security and work conditions could blossom as a kind of automatic extension of an economic order is not realistic," he said. "Therefore it is not admissible. The economy will only be viable if it were human, for man and by man."

Sources in the commission said the Pope had responded to all the requests carried to him by Cardinal Arns on the eve of the trip here. The archdiocese wanted specific reference to:

—Job security, including the right to work.

—Decent compensation at a time when even skilled workers are fortunate to earn $300 a month.

—Better working conditions and factory safety.

The Pope went beyond that, however, painting a critical picture of Brazilian society under the rapid growth formula. He did not mention Brazil by name but the parallels were evident when he said:

"Often an exclusively economic logic, depraved with a crass materialism, has penetrated all fields of existence. It compromises the environment, threatens families and destroys respect for the human person.

"Factories spout out their dirt, disfiguring and polluting the environment, making the air unbreathable. Waves of migrant people crush on in unworthy housing and many lose hope and end in misery."

Heat could last summer

United Press International

The weather system responsible for the scorching Sun Belt heat wave — already blamed for 145 deaths, along with destroying poultry and sapping water supplies — might stay in its present position the rest of the summer, a National Weather Service forecaster says.

The siege of heat, in its 12th day in some sections, has spread to six states.

Forecasters could offer no encouragement. In fact, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Oklahoma City said the subtropical high pressure system causing the record temperatures could be lodged right where it is all summer.

An Arkansas coroner's report issued Thursday raised the heat wave death toll by a score.

The state medical examiner and county coroners had attributed at least 21 deaths to the heat, but Garland County coroner Gary Thomas increased that figure to 41, saying his office had worked 20 cases since June 26 in which heat contributed to death.

Four of the Arkansas deaths were discovered Thursday — including two elderly persons found in stifling, poorly ventilated rooms at Hot Springs. Two of those, Thomas said, were an elderly woman and man found in their respective homes, neither of which were properly ventilated.

In Texas, authorities said 31 deaths were caused directly by the heat and 47 were heat related; Oklahoma reported 24 heat wave deaths; five were recorded in Kansas; one in Missouri; and one in Mississippi.

Most of the victims in the six-state area were the poor and elderly who could find no relief from triple-digit temperatures in their sealed-up, non air-conditioned rooms.

Bill Lene, chief field agent of the Dallas Medical Examiner's office, said "The elderly are helpless, and they realize they're helpless against those uncontrollable elements. They defend themselves the best way they can."

Mae Anderson, 73, said she can't read and hadn't heard about emergency cooling-off shelters in Dallas.

A Dallas medical examiner, Dempsey Gordon, said he was sent to check the remains of an elderly man who died in an apartment equipped with portable fans.

Americans celebrate birthday

United Press International

Americans celebrated the nation's 204th birthday today with traditional fireworks displays — set off to the strains of the "1812 Overture" and "Stars and Stripes Forever" — and some not so traditional methods of celebration.

In Kansas City, Mo., a group of people planned to show their patriotism by ringing bells at noon, remembering the 53 Americans being held hostage in Iran.

Roman Sawka, a naturalized American citizen who fled Russia after World War II, was to unveil a 7,776-square-foot, 108-by-72-foot, nylon map of the United States to show how much he appreciates his new homeland.

"The idea just came as something to do to show my appreciation to the country," said Sawka, a resident of Rohnert Park, Calif. "I get tired of people knocking this country all the time."

Thursday night, more than 350,000 Chicagoans jammed Grant Park to watch an impressive fireworks display launched from two barges in Lake Michigan. The Grant Park Symphony Orchestra played Handel's "Music for the Royal Fireworks" and John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" as all kinds of firecrackers were set off to coordinate with the music.

In the nation's capital, the Fourth of July celebration was to feature the Beach Boys and Beethoven. Washington police and city officials predicted 300,000 people would attend the fireworks celebration.

Lebanese factions fighting

BEIRUT (AP) — Sixteen people have been killed and 35 wounded in fighting between rival Christian factions in northern Lebanon in 24 hours, police reported.

A police spokesman also reported two Lebanese Moslems were killed and seven wounded in hostilities between pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militiamen and Iraqi-backed leftist groups in the south Lebanese port city of Sidon.

The fighting in the north began Thursday at three villages between members of former president Suleiman Franjieh's Giants' Brigade and Phalange party militiamen. Phalange officials said their forces controlled the villages and Franjieh's men attacked them.

Franjieh's headquarters at Zagortha, 100 kilometres north of Beirut, could not be reached for comment.

The Phalangists and Franjieh's forces were allies in Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war against an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas. But the Christian factions have been squabbling since 1978 over the continued presence in Lebanon of Syrian peacekeeping forces.

OAU members battle over new admission

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — Moderate and radical African governments squared off for a showdown today at the annual summit meeting of the Organization of African Unity, and the 17-year-old organization of non-white African states may break apart as a result.

Eight moderates, including Morocco, Egypt, Tunisia, and Sudan, said they will quit the 50-state OAU if it grants the "Democratic Sahara Arab Republic" membership in the organization. The republic was proclaimed by the guerrillas of the Polisario Front who, sponsored by Algeria, are fighting to wrest the former Spanish Sahara from Morocco.

Cameroon, Ivory Coast, Senegal and Somalia were the others threatening to walk out. President Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon, one of Africa's elder statesmen, warned the other side against "a fateful decision which could lead to the collapse of our organization."

Spokesmen for Algeria, Ethiopia and Angola said they were determined to get the Sahara Republic admitted to the OAU. This would bring the Polisario Front extensive material, financial and political aid from other members of the organization.

The Sahara issue was the only important matter still facing the four-day meeting, which was scheduled to end today.

Palestine talks to resume

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It took two days of bargaining talks, presided over by an American mediator, but officials from Egypt and Israel finally agreed to resume negotiations on Palestinian autonomy.

That was about all they agreed on.

The Palestinian autonomy talks will resume July 10 in Cairo, the negotiators announced Thursday. But the sides appeared far apart on the key issues of Jerusalem and Israeli security in occupied land.

The decision to start up the talks — which have been recessed since May — came after two days of discussions set up by President Carter.

The Egyptian negotiator, Gen. Kamal Hassan Ali, the Israeli negotiator, Josef Burg, and the American mediator, Sol Linowitz, said "they agree to resume the negotiations with the goal of reaching agreement on full autonomy."

Negotiations will resume with a series of committee sessions in Cairo and those are expected to run six to eight weeks. The negotiators said there would be no deadline or target date, but there appeared to be disagreement on even that procedural point.

Peace plan rejected by IRA

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army, key combatant in Northern Ireland's bloodshed, rejected outright Thursday new British proposals for ending the strife there.

Leaders of the two main Protestant parties in the British-ruled province dismissed the plan's central option for Roman Catholic power-sharing.

Roman Catholic politicians and the government of the Irish republic gave the proposals a lukewarm welcome.

The reactions indicated little hope that the latest and long-awaited British initiative on Northern Ireland would fare any better than its predecessors.

The province has been without home rule for six years, being governed directly from London because of the sectarian violence.

At the heart of the proposals, made public Wednesday in a discussion document of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, are two options for restoring a local assembly with joint Roman Catholic-Protestant administration.

Under one option, the Roman Catholic minority would have a guaranteed number of seats in the executive body, or cabinet, according to the number of seats they held in the assembly.

The alternative would be to allow the inevitable Protestant majority in the 80-member assembly to take firm control of the executive, but to establish a joint Protestant-Roman Catholic advisory council with power to block moves by the executive.

Provisional Sinn Fein, legal political mouthpiece of the outlawed and mainly Roman Catholic Provisional wing of the IRA, rejected the British proposals out of hand.

In a statement issued in Dublin, capital of the Irish republic, Provisional Sinn Fein said the proposals would not work and that political agreement will be possible only when the British withdraw from Northern Ireland.

The IRA guerrillas have been fighting to end British control of the province and unite it with the predominantly Roman Catholic republic to the south.

As though to demonstrate IRA feelings about the new plan, a bomb blast blamed on the guerrillas destroyed a country police station early Thursday northwest of Belfast, the Northern Irish capital. A police officer and members of his family were reported injured.

Polish workers return

WARSAW (CP) — About 6,000 workers at Ursus tractor factory near Warsaw and 3,500 workers at a motor parts plant in Tczew, near Gdansk on the Baltic Sea, returned to work after managers explained meat price increases and promised to raise wages.

Informed sources said the workers in the two plants were promised pay increases of almost 10 per cent.

The workers had walked off their jobs in protest against higher meat prices in what was seen as the country's most serious outbreak of labor unrest in four years.

The walk-out protests began Tuesday when a new meat distribution system was adopted without prior announcement.

There were no reports of a repetition of the disturbances which sprang from sudden price increases in June, 1976.

Under the new marketing system, which the Communist party daily Trybuna Ludu said would mean higher prices, more meat and poultry would be sold at commericial outlets instead of heavily-subsidized government butchers.

The measures took effect Tuesday but were announced officially Wednesday.

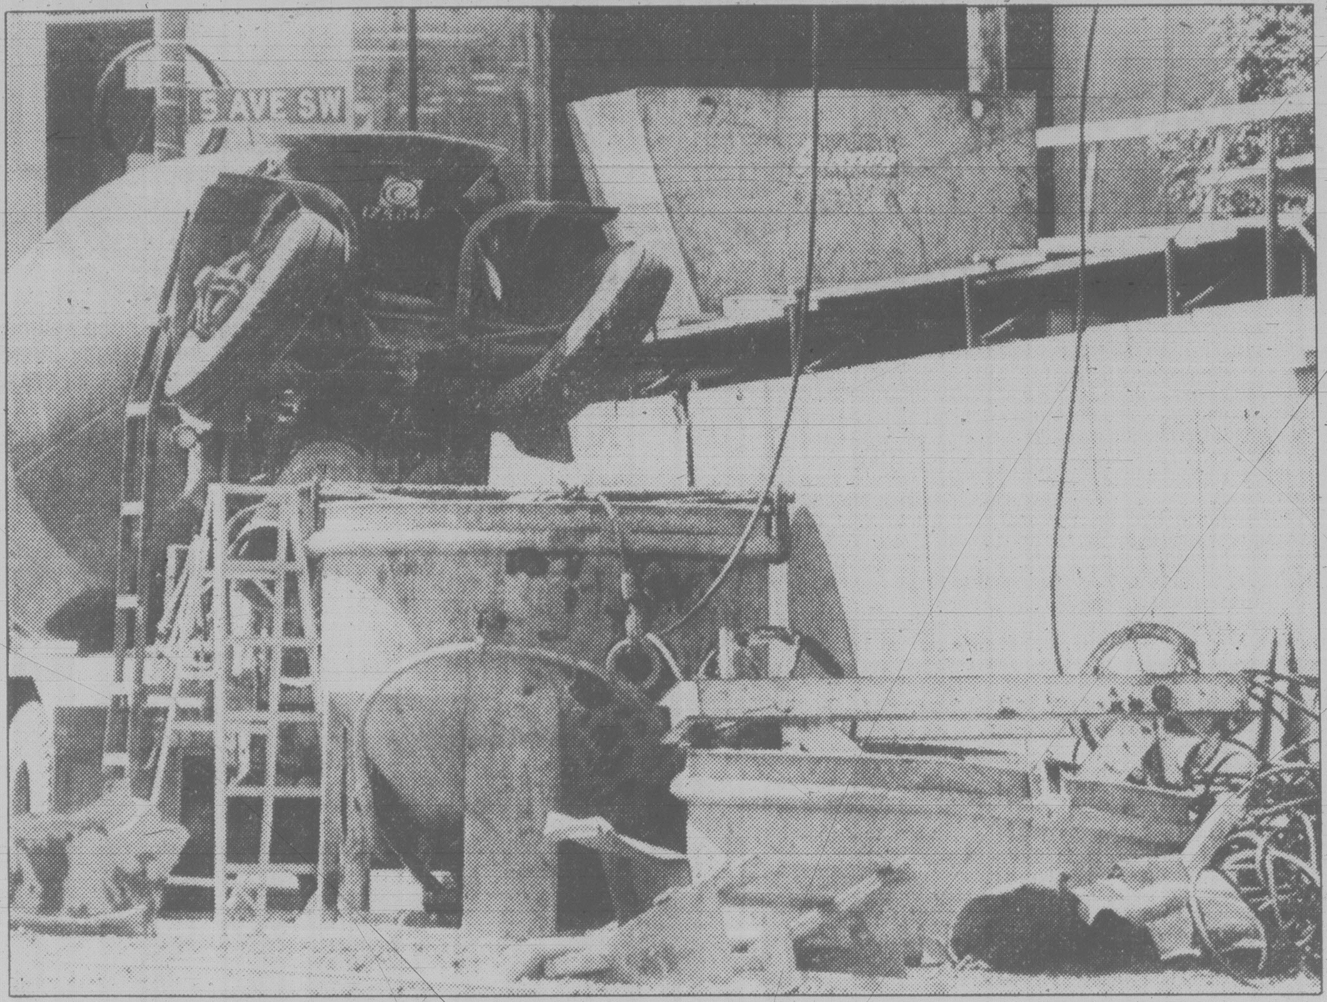
F-18 fighter mired in doubt



BURIED BUCKET: A 3,700-kilogram bucket of concrete (right) lies embedded in sidewalk after plunging 19 floors on a downtown Calgary construction site Thursday. The bucket, buried next to a bucket as it normally looks on the ground, toppled from the top of the Esso Plaza project and barely missed workers, pedestrians and vehicles on the street below.

Firm battles critics

Times News Services

The sleek F-18 fighter that Canada and the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps are buying is getting a bad rap from persistent congressional critics, a veteran test pilot and a senior executive of builder McDonnell Douglas Corp. complained Wednesday.

Joe Waldner, vice-president and general manager for the F-18 program, particularly criticized Representative Bruce Vento (Dem. Minn.) for claiming the F-18 isn't safe for landing on carriers.

"That's absolutely not true," Waldner insisted.

He conceded there have been a series of small problems involving the wing design landing gear and operating range of the F-18. Most have now been corrected, Waldner said.

Amid these and other nagging hints that the fighter planes Canada just bought may be seriously deficient and far more costly than expected, Canada's Defence Minister Gilles Lamontange bravely insisted Thursday that he got a good deal.

"I'm not worried," the minister told FP News Service.

Others certainly are. New Democratic Party defence critic Terry Sargeant told the House of Commons there is "something drastically wrong" with the F-18.

The Winnipeg MP says the plane is so unsafe that President Carter is on the verge of cancelling the U.S. Navy's $30 billion purchase order. He expects a decision from the president next week.

Lamontagne ordered 137 of the planes from Los Angeles-based McDonnell Douglas Corp. last April for an estimated $2.5 billion — the largest, and one of the most controversial, government contracts in Canadian history.

The minister acknowledged that the plane has come under severe criticism in the United States in recent weeks, but dismissed doubts about its safety as "strictly allegations."

He added, however, that he plans to meet U.S. Defence Secretary Harold Brown next week "and I intend to ask him a few questions about it."

In the meantime, the defence department has a team of experts monitoring production of the F-18 and a test pilot posted in the United States to make sure the prototype meets Canada's specifications.

The fighter plane contract — which some say is sure to exceed $4 billion by the time the planes are delivered in 1983 — came after three years of bids, counter-bids and wrangling.

Lamontagne's assurances did little to placate Sargeant, who said outside the Commons that he fears Lamontagne has locked Canada into a multi-billion contract for fighter planes which may never get off the ground.

"I hope I'm wrong," he said, "but it looks to me as if we're going to get stuck with a fighter which will never see active service."

Unsettling reports about the F-18 have been pouring in from the U.S. in recent weeks.

Congressman Vento last month claimed he had unearthed "startling new information which shows that not only is the plane well behind production schedules, it is running $11 billion over budget and is suffering from major technical difficulties."

A report issued in February by the U.S. General Accounting Office shows that:

— The plane, which has been on the drawing board since 1975, does not accelerate as quickly as it should.

— There are problems getting its nosewheel off the ground during take-off.

— It weighs 2,000 pounds more than originally planned.

Liquor on ferry idea attacked

Socred MLA Jack Kempf's suggestion that bar service replace food on B.C. ferries is thoughtless and irresponsible, the B.C. Automobile Association said today.

"At a time when alcohol-related automobile accidents are common, the idea of turning vehicular ferries into floating bars is ridiculous," BCAA spokesman Graham Edis said in a news release.

Edis said the prospect of 100 cars an hour leaving ferries for Vancouver, Victoria and Nanaimo — after their drivers have spent 1½ hours drinking — is frightening.

Kempf said ferry trips are too brief to warrant food service and should be scrapped in favor of revenue-producing bar service.

"If I had my way there would be no food service on the ferry system between the islands," he said.

"Where else in the world do you find an hour and 40-minute trip on a ferry with the provision of food? I think it's ridiculous."

The proposal by Kempf, chairman of the legislature's Crown corporations committee, was also criticized by a spokesman for the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society.

James Drinkwater, a counsellor with the society, said: "It isn't a good idea. The main reason is that B.C. Ferries is ostensibly part of the highways system.

And Transport Minister Alex Fraser recently told the legislature's committee on Crown corporations he is opposed to alcohol sales on ferries.

The government's B.C. Steamship Corp., which operates a service between here and Seattle, and the Canadian Pacific Railway, which operates a ferry between Vancouver and Nanaimo, have bar service on their vessels.

Gold thief 'imaginative'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A "very imaginative" young business school graduate and Brinks Co. employee disappeared just days before discovery of the loss of about $1.5 million in gold Krugerrands.

It was the largest inside theft in the firm's history.

The district attorney's office said grand theft charges have been filed against Rick Douglas Cunningham, 21, of Brea, Calif., who was last seen June 20 leaving his job as a clerk at Brinks western headquarters in downtown Los Angeles.

Lt. Abel Armas, in charge of the investigation, said Cunningham was a "trusted employee" of the company who stole the gold over a period of 2 ½ months, probably without the help of accomplices.

He said Cunningham received a finance degree from California Polytechnic at Pomona last June and had been a clerk at Brinks for less than a year.

Armas said detectives have determined the method used in getting the coins out of the highly secure vault and Brinks building, but refused to discuss the details.

Liberals hear west's pitch

WINNIPEG (CP) — Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy opened a national Liberal policy convention today warning delegates they must be prepared to accommodate Western Canadians so they are no longer "second class citizens."

Addressing the first national Liberal convention ever held in the West, Axworthy said Western Canadians are "no longer satisfied to feel the traditional role of the hinterland."

Axworthy, the lone Western MP in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet and a potential successor to the retiring Liberal leader, was introduced to the 2,000 delegates as the man who can rebuild the party's fortunes in the West and "breach the western curtain" that had not only divided the nation but the party as well.

Those words of praise were sung by Clyne Harradence, convention co-chairman and an unsuccessful Liberal candidate from the last election in the Saskatchewan riding of Prince Albert.

Only two Liberals were elected in Western Canada Feb. 18 — Axworthy and Bob Bockstael from the Winnipeg riding of St. Boniface.

On the eve of the convention, Liberal cabinet ministers unveiled a $60 million drought program for the parched Prairies and a $300 million package for development of British Columbia coal.

Both programs had been in the works for several weeks but were not announced until Thursday, the day before the cabinet was to meet its Western Canadian supporters.

Senator Alasdair Graham, retiring party president, welcomed delegates to the convention by stressing the need of the party "to rebuild and revitalize the Liberal party especially in Western Canada. That, ladies and gentlemen, is our challenge."

Senator Graham earlier conceded that a prime reason for chosing Winnipeg as the convention site was to increase the party's support in the West.

To try and give the convention more of a Western flavor, resolutions from the four western provinces are to take up the first half of the four hours devoted today to policy debates.

NDP raps site choice for meet

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Thursday Premier Bill Bennett is setting a dangerous political precedent by holding a joint B.C.—Alberta cabinet meeting at Government House, residence of Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving.

"He's throwing a political aura over Government House, which should be above and separate from politics," Barrett said.

Bennett, asked earlier why he chose Government House for the meeting, said he was doing so because the building belongs to the people and has the right amount of space and atmosphere.

The premier would not agree that the vice-regal residence is an inappropriate place to hold a political meeting, noting that Alberta's Government House is often used as a conference centre.

But Barrett said he had checked and found Alberta's lieutenant-governor has not lived in the building since 1938 and since the mid-1960s it has been used as a conference centre.

"Using B.C.'s Government House is entirely different," said Barrett. "If the lieutenant-governor was not living there then he could compare it to Alberta. But by leaving a half-truth said, the premier is misleading us again."

Bell-Irving said the province paid for the residence and is entitled to use it.

Meanwhile Bennett has refused comment on widespread conjecture that a joint B.C.-Alberta cabinet meeting in Victoria next Friday is designed as a show of strength on the issue of provincial control of resource revenues.

"I don't want to comment on speculation," he said.

It is generally accepted that energy pricing will be high on the agenda. Bennett and Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta are adamantly opposed to a federal proposal to tax natural gas exports.

In recent days, Lougheed has declined to rule out speculation that he is considering a sovereignty association referendum for his province.

What is it? Nobody seems to care

MASSET (CP) — Paul Bower has a torpedo-shaped device on the deck of his deep-sea fishing boat, the Kolberg, tied up at the dock in this Queen Charlotte Islands' town.

The contraption looks out of place because it doesn't belong there and Bower is wondering why he got involved with the thing in the first place.

By his reckoning, it cost $7,000 to salvage what appears to be a Soviet-built sonar device. It also took four days and considerable ingenuity, sweat and cursing to float it off the beach and hoist it on deck.

So far the best offer he's had is $700 from the Canadian Forces, enough to tempt Bower to dump it overboard and forget the whole thing.

It started 10 days ago in the pub at Masset. Bower and Dwight Welwood, mate on the Kolberg, heard about a big black "thing" on the shore of the Charlottes' Graham Island near Tian Head.

Many strange things turn up in the flotsam and jetsam that drifts in from the open Pacific to the desolate outer shores of the Queen Charlottes on B.C.'s northern coast.

There are U.S. Army ammunition boxes from the Vietnam war across the ocean, glass fish-net floats from Japan, dragger nets from the north Pacific and, sighted recently, the sonar device.

"We decided to go after it as soon as we heard about it," said Welwood. "We found the thing with no trouble. It was nine feet long and weighed about 600 pounds. It's painted black with Russian lettering on it. There was a length of tow cable on it so we figured it wasn't any kind of weapon."

They secured it with rope to drift logs and waited for high tide to float it off. They towed it to Kolberg with a Zodiac raft Bower rented for the salvage job.

Back at Masset, Bower called Major Ron Beale at the Canadian Forces station who brought in an ordnance team from the base at Esquimalt.

"They determined that it's some kind of sonar equipment, probably for mapping the ocean floor," said Beale. "Nothing at all to do with weaponry or espionage."

Beale offered them $200 for it. Bower lowered his price to $5,000 from $7,000. The major's final offer was $700. No deal.

"They said they were going to offer it to the Americans and we said 'go ahead,'" Beale said.

Said Welwood: "We didn't hear back from the U.S. consulate in Vancouver.

"But there's still a chance we can sell it to a museum. I've seen a lot less interesting things in the museum at the Smithsonian Institution."

Goolagong wins title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia defeated Chris Evert Lloyd of the United States 6-1, 7-6 today to win the Wimbledon women's singles tennis title, her first since 1971.

Earlier John McEnroe defeated Jimmy Connors, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to gain the men's final against Bjorn Borg. (See earlier story page 22).

TV Mailbag

My question concerns Barbara Del Geddes who is so terrific in Dallas. She still retains that certain twinkle in her eye that she had when she killed her husband with a frozen leg of lamb and later roasted it and served it to the detectives who were wondering where the murder weapon was. Do you recall the picture? It does not seem to have been repeated recently. — Wilma Vasvary, New Brunswick, N.J.

Of course I recall it. In fact I was just discussing it with a friend who was thinking of doing in someone with the old frozen leg of lamb routine. It aired as an episode of Alfred Hitchcock Presents, which is still seen in many cities in syndication.

AN ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT TO THE VICTORIA TIMES, JULY 4, 1980

HOMES TODAY

Jackson house open to all on Sunday

The Hallmark Society is holding an open house at their newest project, "The Jackson House" at 425 Parry Street on Sunday, July 6 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The society, a group of people interested in the preservation and restoration of heritage homes, is trying to raise the full purchase price of this house so that it can become their operations centre. In this way, they hope they can show Victorians the possibilities in the various heritage homes around the Greater Victoria area. Too, "The Jackson House" will become a showcase to attract attention to the Society's Revolving Fund, which will mean that other work can be done to protect and upgrade older Victorian homes.

Built in 1901 for Richard and Mary Ann Jackson, this home is typical of the late Victorian style of architecture and will act as a demonstration that something need not be modern to function well or serve a useful purpose in today's world of prefabricated materials and concrete construction.

The Hallmark Society is planning to restore the home to its original appearance, which will involve removing subsequent additions to the facade. Research is being carried out so that the house will be painted and decorated as it would have appeared in the summer of 1901. Original or suitable replacements of fixtures, windows and home furnishings will be incorporated.

"The Jackson House" originally stood on Simcoe Street and was moved to its new location two blocks away with the interim assistance of the British Columbia Heritage Trust.

Light ideas for dark rooms and extra seating for guests

DECOR SCORE

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a very dark dining room in our older home and I'd like to lighten the room with paint and a new floor.

Now the room is an avocado green and the carpeting which matches the living room's is sea green. However, many spills on the dining room carpeting and its hard wear make me feel I would like to remove the carpet entirely and start over.

I like modern designs, although the room at this time has no personality because we are using an old hand-me-down table and chairs I'd like to replace.

Please suggest some ideas for improving the looks of this room. — T.P.

A. Certainly light colors will enlarge your room and make it seem lighter. Avocado green can be pretty dark when there is no or little artificial light in the room.

If you wish to create all the light you can, perhaps a foil wallpaper would reflect light from a large, imposing chandelier or wall lights. Or you might consider installing spots of light in the ceiling that would wash your walls and provide a pleasant level of ilumination.

Use reflective materials in your furnishings, too, for maximum light — choosing from materials such as glass, chrome, brass and mirror.

An interesting and intriguing idea is offered by Bill Marley, director of color and design for GAF floor products. Marley turned a tiny, dark space in a 60-year-old divided townhouse into a bright, airy and very contemporary dining room. The space had only one small window that opened onto an air shaft.

Marley screened the old cracked and peeling plaster walls with sheets of translucent frosted vinyl set on the bias and positioned in moldings at the floor and ceiling. Behind the panels, warm fluorescent lights were installed.

Tubes were recessed behind the floor molding so that their light would be diffused as it washed up the walls. Stainless steel angles sold in lengths at building supply stores hold the vinyl panels in position.

A feeling of sculptural weightlessness is seen in the ceiling-hung lighting fixtures which floats like a pleated paper cloud over the dining table.

The original wood floor needed replacing and so Marely installed Gafstar's "Lace Circles" with self-stick back and a white with light brown snowflake design.

Q. I'd like to cover my bedroom lampshades with a new fabric I'm using for my bedspread and a table skirt. Do you know where to go for directions o how to pleat your own lampshades? — T.P.

A. Try the Simplicity pattern book. Directions are given for lampshades among other decorative items for the home. In fact, it's surprising how many good ideas to inspire our do-it-yourself instincts are carried in the pattern books.

Q. We have a casual lifestlye and like to have buffets. I have rather a problem when entertaining because I like traditional designs and very comfortable upholstered pieces but our rooms are not large. Do you have any ideas for increasing seating especially for casual entertaining?

We have a small sofa in our room, a pair of small basket chairs and a lounge chair. I might have room for some additional seating but not too much. What would you suggest? — S.V.

Your problem confronts just about all of us who are finding home spaces shrinking yet our desire to entertain increasing.

Have you ever considered a square coffee table with four upholstered ottomans slipped underneath? I think they provide great flexibility for everyday living as well as entertaining. When space is an everyday problem they can be compactly stowed under the table and when the party gets underway, the little stools or ottomans are ready for a guest.

Or, if you have space for a long narrow table in your room to use as a buffet or library table, you could slip nicely upholstered little benches under it to press into entertaining service.

Please send questions for Decor Score to Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

YOU CAN MAKE IT!

Bag your weeds in wheeled Bag-it-all

By STEVE ELLINGSON

We take a lot for granted here in Canada . . . a lot of the good life especially. Take a simple invention like the plastic bag, for instance. Giant plastic bags, to be more specific. They have simply thousands of uses in our everyday life, but their greatest boon to modern Canadian men and women must be as trash bin and laundry hamper.

But how to hold these bags up? The answer's simple if you look at the unit shown here. It's called the BAG-IT-ALL, and can really solve your trash disposal problem beautifully.

You simply take the giant plastic bag (which you can purchase at your neighborhood store) and secure it at four corners inside this sturdily-constructed yet lightweight mobile unit. Now if you've ever tried to hold up one of these bags and fill it with grass cuttings, leaves or other trash at the same time, you'll know why we dreamed up the BAG-IT-ALL.

The bag is held firmly in place while you fill it with the aid of a generous-size scoop. It also contains side-mounted racks for your rake and other garden tools. Truly the handyman's home companion . . . a really fresh approach to solving your trash problem.

Editor's note: I can see where something like this might be useful for apartment dwellers needing to take laundry to the laundromat. You wouldn't need the scoop, or the leaf cut-outs, but the side racks would be handy for soap, sprays, and fabric softeners.

To obtain the easy-to-follow BAG-IT-ALL PATTERN NUMBER 493, send $2.00 (add 50¢ extra per pattern for handling and mailing) by cheque or money order to: U-Bild Pattern Dept., Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal H4V 2Y3.

ENERGYSAVE

By PETER TONGE

(This is the fifth of seven articles on do-it-yourself energy conservation in which Monitor staff writer Peter Tonge gives tips on plugging energy leaks in your home, tapping and storing solar heat, and insulating your shutters and hot-water heater.)

Holman and Roberta Davis live in Topsham, Maine, where fall comes early, spring comes late, and winter, at times, seems interminable. Yet in a south-facing room they recently added to their home, they can, through an open window, gain a winter tan as effectively as on any subtropical beach. And while they bask in their "little bit of Florida," this same room is pumping warm air into the rest of the house at a rate that should cut 20 to 25 per cent from their annual fuel bill.

The Davises' home was a typical 1½-story Cape Code until they added their sun room, greenhouse, or walk-in solar collector, as some people call it. They needed additional living space and were planning to add a conventional room when they read of the advantages of passive solar construction. Why not, they thought, and they have been glad they scorned convention ever since.

The 10-by-16-foot addition was designed by Charles Wing of Cornerstones Energy Group Inc. of Brunswick, Maine, and built by a local contractor for $20 a square foot. It consists of a conventional insulated roof and east and west walls. The south-facing wall, however, is all double-paned glass (actually patio doors, minus handles and locks), which slopes at an angle of 60 degrees to allow for maximum penetration of the winter sun.

On any day the sun shines, the sun room "heats the entire house to around 70 degrees F," Mrs. Davis says. But she adds that "on realy cold days the house quickly cools down once the sun goes down, and the central heating has to come on."

Large hinged wooden shutters can be closed at night, or on really dull days to conserve heat.

On just heat savings, the payback on such construction could take from 10 to 15 years. But the Davises were looking primarily for additional living space, and in the process they found a system that eventually will pay for itself in the free heat it delivers.

Moreover, the new room is what the family describes as quality living space. "Delightful", Mrs. Davis calls it. "I love to come out here to read and sew, and it makes a perfect game room for the children."

The Davises expect to get the most advantage from their sun room during late January and February, when winter temperatures plunge to their lowest. Wing explains why: "By the end of January the sun has come a lot farther north. In other words, there is a good deal more sun around. At the same time there are fewer cloudy days in the depths of winter, so that the full strength of the sun gets through."

The Northeast Solar Energy Center lists these advantages to be gained from an attached greenhouse or sun room:

—More space: The sun room provides pleasant year-round living space that can be used as a playroom, breakfast nook, sewing and ironing room, greenhouse, etc. Some people even use it for sunbathing during winter.

--Reduced fuel bill: As fuel costs for the rest of the home continue to rise, the free heat from an attached greenhouse can save 15 per cent and more of the annual bill, depending on the size of the home. The high heat of a greenhouse (80 to 90 degrees on even the coldest days) will vent naturally into the rest of the house through an open window or door. Better still, a small exhaust fan will speed up the process. The Davises spread the heat evenly through the house using a standard three-speed household fan.

—Added resale value: As home heating costs continue to rise, any addition that improves the energy efficiency of the home increases its value by more than just the cost of construction.

—Fresh low-cost vegetables year-round: The U.S. Department of Agriculture predicts a 10 per cent increase in the price of fresh produce at the marketplace this year. But a moderate-size greenhouse can readily produce $275 worth of home-grown produce in a year, depending on the skill of the homeowner.

—Low-cost construction: Construction costs of attached solar greenhouses should be no more, and generally less, than conventional construction costs. Materials for a moderate-size greenhouse (150 to 200 square feet) cost from $800 to $1,200 for the do-it-yourselfer. Ddouble that price for an installed greenhouse.

An important component of the solar greenhouse is thermal mass—any material (brick, stone, concrete, water) that absorbs heat during the day and then returns it to the air as the temperature begins to fall. A concrete floor, poured over foam insulation, provides excellent thermal mass. Another option is water-filled barrels or plastic bottles. "Two to 3 gallons of water per square foot of glazing will maintain a temperature difference of about 30 degrees F above outdoor lows overight," according to the Northeast Solar Energy Center. Good thermal mass also prevents a greenhouse from overheating during the day. It also enables the homeowner to use the heat from a wood or coal stove more efficiently.

More on ways to save energy you've got

By PETER TONGE

In recent months a number of triangular homes have begun springing up in New England. They are among the most efficient passive solar houses ever developed. A small wood stove is about the only backup heating system needed. Their heavy concrete (thermal mass) foundations and walls suggest they will endure for a thousand years. Yet the construction costs are coming in at less than conventional per-square-foot building costs.

For the do-it-yourselfer, energy-efficient, inexpensive long-end homes are making a comeback — yet another idea whose time has returned, the log-end users say.

In a modern Maine home, an all-brick stove is stoked every morning with a bundle of twigs and small sticks. For perhaps an hour it blazes away before dying down. But in that period it has stored enough heat in its maze of masonry tunnels to keep the house warm the rest of the day. In very cold weather it is fired up again in the evening. It is called a Russian stove, and besides small tree branches and other pruning it also can use shavings and straw. The key to its efficiency is the fact that the fuel is burned fast and then the escaping heat is blocked off.

Conventional wisdom suggests that windmill-generated electricity so far is too costly to be economic for most homeowners. But there is such a thing as a wind furnace — wind-generated resistance heating that appears to be economically feasible right now.

In Harrisville, N. H., plans for a "different" solar hot-water heater have been developed and soon will be ready for distribution. The prototype suggests that the home handyman will be able to build one for $200 to $300 and get all the hot water his family needs.

Life covers, signed editions, and commemorative pieces

By JOHN HEARN

Mr. L. Langlois of Red Deer, Alta., sends a photocopy of the front cover of a Life magazine found between the walls of a home in Grande Prairie, 30 years ago. It is dated Jan. 1st, 1883.

This is an authentic first edition of the magazine which preceded the modern version of Life Magazine and was published from 1883 to 1936. Charles Dana Gibson (of Gibson Girl fame) was the editor for many years and most issues carry some of his illustrations. My out-of-date American price guide says they are worth $3.50-$5.00 each unless the covers are by Maxfield parrish in which case they are worth $15.00 each.

A letter from Miss Sybil Exshaw of Victoria, B.C., who has a hardcover book of poems by Rose O'Neil called Master Mistress, published by Alfred Knopf in 1922. The author has written a note on the flyleaf. Miss Exshaw adds that Rose O'Neil was the creator of the Kewpie doll which was such a huge success before the First World War, and that few people know that she was also a gifted writer and artist. "My book has prints of some of her illustrations — pen drawings which add much interest to the book."

The fact is that even though Miss O'Neil received over $1,400,000 in royalties from the sale of Kewpie dolls and related merchandise she was primarily an illustrator; that one of her creations captured public imagination was one of those happy accidents which should happen to all of us. The famous doll was designed by Joseph L. Kallus; based on her illustrations in Ladies' Home Journal and similar organs. Kallus was president of Cameo Doll Products and from 1914 onwards, when the first of the Kewpies appears, he too was heading for a fortune.

I have never heard of Rose O'Neil as a poet and I would assume that a signed edition would be considered quite valuable by doll collectors even if she cut no ice in the world of literature.

Mrs. Manuel of Innisfail, Ont., owns an Edward VIII coronation mug and a mug made to commemorate the visit of King George 6th and Queen Elizabeth to Canada in 1939.

Non collectors are always intrigued by commemoratives referring to a coronation which never took place, but since the King abdicated barely more than three months before the coronation was due it may be assumed that commemoratives numbering some hundreds of millions were already on the market, they are not likely, therefore to be spectacularly valuable.

The visit of the King and Queen to Canada in 1939, whatever it meant to Canadians was a less cosmic event in the history of the Royal Family; the quantity of commemoratives issued would be far fewer and they are presumably more valuable. Having said it is necessary to point out that the word 'commemorative' covers everything from such items as the Mappin & Webb sterling silver punch bowls issued to commemorate the Queen's Jubilee in 1977 in a limited edition of 25 copies at a list price of 2,500 pounds, to the blinding mass of 98-centware made to be sold by the millions in variety stores. In any collectible there is always the factor of authentic quality which is finally more important that the occasion it is celebrating.

The Commemorative Collectors Society, incidentally has its own definition of what constitutes a limited edition; it is worth repeating. It is an item which has been declared limited when first announced with a precise and stated number or limit declared at that time.

Robertson Street

Robertson Street, in the Gonzales area, was named for A. Rocke Robertson, who, before he was 40, had been a member of the Legislature, Mayor of Victoria, Provincial Secretary, and Justice of the Supreme Court.

Robertson was born in Ontario and came to Victoria in the early 1860's. He took an active part in the move to have the capital of British Columbia transferred from New Westminster to Victoria, and supported B.C.'s union with the other provinces in Confederation.

In 1871 Robertson was elected member for Esquimalt in the Legislature. He was the first Provincial Secretary in British Columbia's history, being named by the first Premier, Hon. J. F. McCreight. In 1880 he was appointed Supreme Court Judge, but served in this office for less than a year. Robertson died at the age of 40, leaving seven sons.

INTERIOR DESIGN

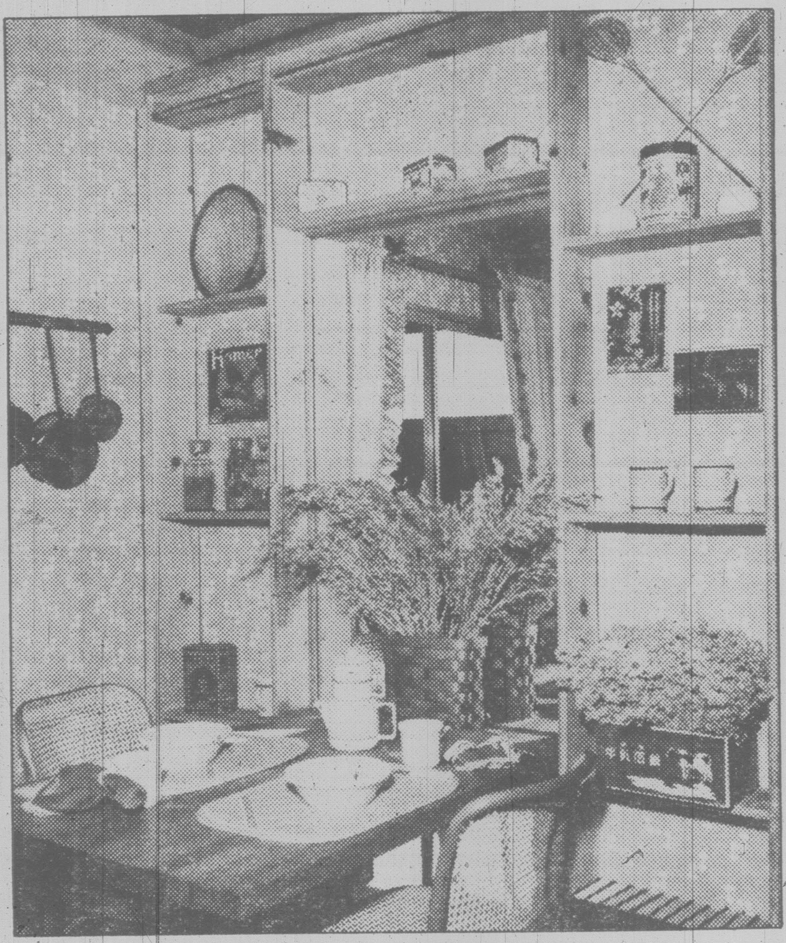
Mirrored shelves, in-scale table create kitchen dining space

By PAULINE GRAVES

Upon seeing this small, square kitchen, most people would say that in no way could a dining area be incorporated within these walls, but it was, and without crowding. The mirror helps. Mirrors always help to create the illusion of space where little or none exists.

Scale is all important, scale, the size of the furniture in relation to the room size. Therefore a small table, only 30-inches by 42-inches, stands with one end against the wall. The size handles two chairs very nicely, and a third can fit at the end because of the pedestal base, even a fourth chair is possible when the free-standing table is pulled into the room. Generally though, the table remains as seen here, perpendicular to the wall. And the butcher block top functions as a convenient, extra counter.

Rather than the table's being against a blank wall, it fits into a shelf arrangement and seems to be a part of it. The shelves also help create spaciousness because the shelves projecting into the room add depth to the wall. However, they are made of 1''x6''s, quite shallow, and take up a minimum of floor space. the sides are just 18-inches wide, framing the 30-inch wide mirror in the center. And the shelves are 22-inches apart, open to the wall behind, which gives an uncluttered, uncrowded look to the structure. The clear finish lets the knots in the pine become part of the room's pattern, and the rounded edges hve a furniture look. Interiors were by Beverly Trupp.



A mirror was centred in this shelf structure to make this small kitchen seem larger. But its location insures that those sitting at the table do not see their own reflections which would be a distracting element.

NOW YOU KNOW

By GEORGE DALGLEISH

Worms, rust and birdie-doo and testing floors for damp

Q. We are tearing down an old grainary on our farm out of town and want to use the drop siding which is all weathered and is a nice silver color on the rec room walls. Although we don't see any bugs or evidence or worms in it, we wonder if it is necessary to have it treated in any way to kill the insects?

A. Not if you can't see any insects in the wood. Usually if the wood is dry insects don't live in it in any case. I have used this type of material in basement rec rooms myself and haven't had any complaints from my customers. Of course if you see a worm or a bug sticking its head out of a wormhole then I would throw that piece of wood out. A way to tell if there are worms in the wood or not is to place the wood in a garage or some other area and then listen for them eating. They make a scrunching noise as they eat the wood and it is quite easy to hear it. If you wonder how I know this, I used to live in a log cabin while my father worked in a sawmill during the winter months. The log cabin roof was supported by log beams and in the middle of the night the worms would decide to have a meal right above my bed and keep me awake until I got an axe and chopped them out. If you are concerned about some insects living in your wood, I would soak the wood in a clear preservative material that is used for fence posts. You can make a soaking thorough by using a piece of plastic and either earth or sand for a trench. Make sure that there are no holes in the plastic by filling it with water first and then fill it with the clear preservative and soak the wood in the preservative for fifteen to twenty minutes. This should kill the little gaffers.

Q. We have a faded red cement sidewalk and our problem is that crows and other birds are using the walk for their droppings. I have tried scrubbing it with bleach and hot soapy water but the stains are still there. Have you a suggestion?

A. Try wetting the sidewalk and sprinkling crystals of trisodium phosphate (TSP) and letting it sit for a few minutes. Then use a stiff bristle brush to scrub the sidewalk. This should remove the stains. If it doesn't repeat the process but let the crystals lay on the sidewalk longer before using the brush on it. Remember to use rubber gloves as undiluted trisodium phosphate can be harmful to your hands. If this doesn't work then obtain a commercial brick and tile cleaner. There are brick and tile cleaners made by the Resilicrete Company that come in powder form in a can. The instructions for use are on the can.

Q. We put a new window in our home and had to replace some siding around where the window was held in. Now we notice that rust stains are running down over the paint, the nailheads appear to be rusted and the paint has come off them. What did we do wrong and how can we rectify it?

A. What you did wrong likely is you used ordinary common nails or coated nails. You should have used galvanized nails, preferrably the hot dipped type. Unfortunately the rust can continue for a considerable length of time. The solution would be to recess the nails under the surface of the siding. However if it is a common nail then the head likely is too large to recess under the surface. If it is a small nail that can be recessed then you simply use a wood filler to fill the nailhead after it has been recessed and then repaint. If there are rust stains on the paint running down over the siding use a solution of trisodium phosphate and water to remove the rust stains. If the nailheads are large and cannot be recessed then I recommend that you remove the nails and putty in the area where the nails were removed and renail with the proper galvanized siding nails. Unfortunately this procedure may crack the siding but you really don't have any choice. It is either that or live with the rust stains.

Q. Our contractor who is building our rec room told us that he could put parquet flooring right onto the concrete floor since our floor is very dry and we live in a high area. We are a bit skeptical because we feel that the wood may rot when installed right onto the concrete. Have you had any experience with this method of construction?

A. Yes I have installed a number of parquet floors right on concrete but I've used a special glue made specifically for that purpose. The people who supply the parquet flooring can tell you what glue to use. Also expansion areas must be left around the edge of the room for expansion and contraction of the wood floor. The contractor, if he is a flooring expert, should know how this is done. But the floor must be absolutely dry and no problems with seepage or moisture should have been present. Also you should take a moisture test. A simple way is to lay a rubber mat on the floor and if it turns dark after a few days that means moisture is coming through the floor. Also you could tape a piece of plastic, making sure it has no holes in it, to the floor about two feet square. If droplets of water form underneath the plastic or if the floor turns dark then you have a moisture problem and shouldn't put parquet flooring or any type of wood flooring in the basement. But under ideal conditions it makes a beautiful floor, very elegant.

Q. We have the type of wood windows that slide up and down, the old-fashioned type. Although we know these windows are not the most efficient, we can't afford to install new ones. Our main problem is the fact that they are always sticking. How can we get them unstuck and assure that they will operate freely?

A. First of all don't dismiss your old double hung wooden windows as being no good. They likely are better than a lot of the cheap type of aluminum sliding windows that are on the market. A wood window is really one of the best windows that you can buy and if it has a sealed unit in it, it is even better. However your window likely only has single glazing and therefore the efficiency is less, at least in the glass part. Now to your problem. Try and get the window to move up and down if you can by prying it with a chisel or a flat piece of metal. Once you have it moving up or down then use a special spray available from building supply stores and spray in the area between the window stop and the frame where the window slides. This special spray is made for unsticking drawers and other wood things around the home that are supposed to slide. If this doesn't work you may have to take off the window stop. This is a small piece of wood usually about an 1¼-inch or 1⅝-inch wide by about ⅜-inch thick that goes on the frame on the inside of the window sash. Remove this stop and try and remove the sash. Once you have the sash removed it may be necessary to plane it down slightly since it could be that the sash has swelled or the frame has shrunk. Once you get it working freely, make sure that you seal any new wood. This will prevent moisture from going into the wood and causing the problem all over again. Then replace the window along with a lubrication spray, both on the frame and on the window sash and the window stop. Of course if the house is quite old you might have to install new window stops since the old ones will be very brittle and likely will shatter when you remove them.

"Building a Better Way"

'New space; new life' his motto

By JOHN RUSSELL

1980 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Looking at houses is to me what looking at a pretty woman was to Don Giovanni: fatal. I cannot resist houses. It is not so much that I collect them as that they collect me. All the way from a tumbledown shack by stagnant water to a tall-faced town house that calls for a staff of 16, I am the predestined prey of whatever is on the market.

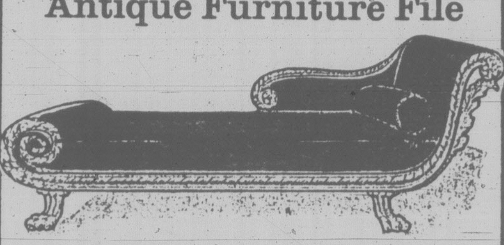
A sign of bad character, some people say. The house-hunter, in their books, is an unsavory mixture of peeping Tom and social climber. Attacks of this kind should be met with hauteur and silence. The true house-hunter knows not only that his is a holy quest, but that he is the knight who will one day bring it to a conclusion. Besides, in his search for the space that really fits him he marches in the advance guard of progress and does his bit for social reform. To be happy in one's house is to be halfway to being a good citizen. Life, liberty and the space that fits: what better charter for an independent spirit?

It takes one to know one, as in other domains of life, and the true house-hunter is recognized on sight by the experienced real estate broker. Virgil to our Dante, the broker steels himself for a lifetime of joint visits. He knows, too, that although the compulsive looker has his rational side, his compulsion comes in part from fantasy. "New space, new life" is his motivation. He is looking for the house that will turn his life around.

This country is the paradise of the compulsive looker. In France, thin lips shut tight at his approach. In Switzerland, he is likely to be run out of the country before he so much as gets an order to view. In Italy, the coveted farmhouse between Florence and Lucca belongs to 22 people, every one of whom has a voice in its disposal. In England, where to move is a disgrace, the human contacts involved are sad beyond endurance. But in this country, to move is a sign of vitality and to look at a house a mark of confidence in the Constitution.

COUCHES

Antique Furniture File



This meridienne, chaise lounge, or recamier, but never a "fainting couch," appeared in Sheraton's "The Cabinet Dictionary" (1803), and he chose to call it a Grecian squab. Fortunately, this nomenclature didn't survive, although the design did for over 50 years. If you happen to encounter an early 19th century meridienne, the price will probably run well over $1,000.
